MRS. WARD TELLS OF MURDER NIGHT

O'BRIEN CHARGES FRAMEUP PLOT

MRS. WALTER S. WARD

Beautiful wife of Walter S. Ward, took the witness stand in his defense under remarkable circumstances Her husband on trial for murder arose from his seat at his counsel's table escorted her to the stand and assisted her gently to the chair there.

MRS. WARD WEEPS ON STAND

State Scores Point Through Testimony of Accused Millionaire's Wife

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Walter S. Ward was called to the witness stand today by the prosecution to testify in the trial of her husband, charged with murder in the first degree of Clarence Peters of Haverhill.

The staff of defense attorneys rose to their feet when Attorney-General Sherman first summoned Mrs. Ward to the stand, but they interposed no objection. Her husband, the defendant, also got to his feet and assisting his wife from her chair, accompanied her around behind the jury box and to the witness stand, where he gently helped her to her seat.

With an air of pathos, she squirmed for a minute, muffled her sobs in her handkerchief, leaned forward and stared straight ahead.

The way for her entrance into the case had been paved by previous witnesses who testified that they had played cards with her, her mother, other relatives and friends of the family on the night that Peters was killed. These witnesses had agreed that they had not seen Ward at his home between 8 o'clock that evening and a half hour after midnight when they left.

Sobbing but withal trying to smile Mrs. Ward calmly answered her questioner.

She said that the first she saw her husband on the night of the killing was between 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning when he entered her room and awakened her.

Answering her husband's attorneys, she testified that it was possible for her husband to have been home earlier and for her not to have seen him until he came into her room.

Asked if he offered any explanation why he visited her so late Mrs.

KEPT AWAY FROM 'WET' PARTY

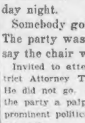
Declares Liquor Flowed Like Water at Pelletier Dinner in Napoli

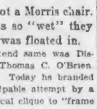
A "mystery party" was given in the Hotel Napoli on Saturday night.

Somebody got a Morris chair. The party was so "wet" they say the chair was floated in.

Invited to attend same was District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien. He did not go. Today he branded the party a palpable attempt by a prominent political clique to "frame me up."

"But it didn't work," said the district attorney heatedly today. "And some of the folks who made the attempt may be sorry before I get through with them.





Thos. C. O'Brien J. C. Pelletier

"I have started an investigation. Two of my assistants were there and today they'll step on the carpet and answer a few questions."

"It is understood there was something to drink there," said the American reporter.

"Something," said Mr. O'Brien, "there was nothing but. I understand whiskey flowed like a fire hose at a three-alarm blaze."

I invited both Pelletier and

2 U.S.A. BALLOONISTS KILLED IN CRASH

Brussels, Sept. 24. (A.P.)—Five airmen including two United States Army lieutenants, lost their lives, another was seriously injured, and five balloons were smashed on the ground or destroyed by lightning in the James Gordon Bennett Cup race, held here under the most adverse weather conditions ever experienced in the history of the competition.

The dead are:

Lieutenant Robert Olmstead of Jersey City, N. J., and Lieutenant J. C. Choplaw of Illinois, both of the United States army balloon S-6.

Lieutenant Olmsted of Boston, Mass., and Lieutenant Choplaw, of the United States Army Balloon S-6

A naval board of inquiry was appointed at the Charlestown Navy Yard today to learn why Edward Dalzell, a seaman, was permitted to lie in a police station cell five hours with a broken neck and fractured skull.

Dalzell, who was 21 years old and attached to the Naval Hospital, Chelsea, was eventually removed to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, where he died.

It is charged the police locked the sailor up on a charge of drunkenness when he refused to give any information about himself, although

ACTRESS SEEKS HANNA RICHES IN MILLIONAIRE'S LOVE PACT

New York, Sept. 24.—Miss Jane Davis Evans, actress, who says the late Daniel R. Hanna, millionaire publisher of Cleveland, when he withdrew his promise to marry her, agreed to pay her $1,550 a month for life, has started proceeding to compel the executors of the estate to settle her claim.

Jane D. Evans

According to papers filed with Surrogate Slater at White Plains, Miss Evans, through Charles F. Dalton and John P. Johnston, has served a special citation on the executors to show cause why a judicial settlement of their accounts should not be made.

The citation, returnable at White Plains September 28, was served on Mark A. Hanna, Carl H. Hanna and Daniel R. Hanna, Jr., executors of their father's estate, estimated to be worth more than $10,000,000.

TURKS TELL U. S. TO GET OUT; DEMAND WARSHIPS DEPART

London, Sept. 24.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Constantinople quotes an Angora message as stating that the Turkish government has decided to press for the withdrawal from the straits of the fleets of all foreign powers.

The message declares that the Turkish government has also decided to demand the withdrawal of all foreign warships from Turkish waters.

It is stated that the Turkish government has instructed its delegation at Constantinople to inform the commissioners of the allied powers that Turkey will not tolerate the presence of foreign warships in Turkish waters after the ratification of the peace treaty.

NEW SQUAD OUT AFTER CRACKSMEN

Because of the alarming increase in safe-cracking in the business section, Police Commissioner Wilson today announced organization of a new defence body to supersede uniformed patrolment.

After visiting the scene of some of the safe robberies, the commissioner assigned headquarters inspectors and special squads from Divisions 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 15 to devote themselves to the capture of the cracksmen.

A detective agency has also been called in.

The heaviest sufferers from the depredations of the cracksmen have been the Liggett Stores. The most recent attempt was in the store of Cobb, Bates & Yerxa on Summer street.

PAINTED WALLS WITH SAUCE; WEST END HUSBAND DIVORCED

A battle which out-distanced the World War for length and almost equalled it for bombardments was the way Mrs. Sadie Feivishovitz described her life with her husband, Samuel, in uncontested testimony today in Suffolk Superior Court before Judge Fox.

One Easter day, Mrs. Feivishovitz told the court, Samuel decorated the chairs with his spaghetti, painted the walls with the sauce and hurled the dishes at her.

On a second occasion, she said, he opened fire with a sad iron, missed, and knocked her into a tub. She was granted a divorce. Her home is at No. 149 Poplar street, West End.

PRESSMEN START FOR N. Y. ON BERRY'S 'DRAFT' ORDER

New York, Sept. 24 (I.N.S.)—George L. Berry, president of the International Pressmen's Union, today sent a telegram to heads of locals throughout the country instructing them to "draft newspaper pressmen and dispatch them to New York immediately.

A gratifying response has been made to a previous telegram, Berry said. "Many loyal union men have already arrived and many others are en route," he stated.

Ford Runs 57 Miles on Gallon of Gasoline

A new automatic and self-regulating device has been invented by John A. Stransky, 736 Fourth St., Pukwana, South Dakota, with which automobiles have made from 40 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. It removes all carbon and prevents spark plug trouble and overheating. It can be installed by anyone in five minutes. Mr. Stransky wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his own risk. Write him today.—Advertisement.

MRS. WARD SOBS ON STAND WHEN CALLED AS MURDER WITNESS

STAGES DRAMATIC SCENE AT TRIAL OF ACCUSED MATE

Ward replied that he did. Justice Warner upheld the contention of the defense that Mrs. Ward could not be called upon to testify what her husband had said to her.

"Was his explanation satisfactory," asked the prosecutor. "Yes," she replied.

Mrs. Ward was apparently composed as she parried the interrogation, but her voice was so soft that her answers were almost inaudible to the spectators who leaned forward in their chairs to catch every word. At times her answers were so low when she was questioned by Attorney-General Sherman that the court clerk had to repeat them for the stenographer and the jury.

Still suppressing her sobs, Mrs. Ward testified that when the first grand jury began the investigation of the murder implicating her husband she went to Bermuda.

After she had been there some weeks, she said, she cabled her husband to know if she could not come home to get her children and go to some other resort. This was arranged, she added, and she took the children to Atlantic City.

To questions of the Attorney-General she answered that she remained there, out of the jurisdiction of New York State, while the last grand jury was re-investigatin the killing and preparing the indictment under which her husbad now is being tried.

The Attorney-General asked Mrs. Ward if Lulu Beryl, the nursemaid, was outside of New York State but still in her employ, and she answered "yes." After Mrs. Ward had said that Mrs. Beryl was a nurse for her children, Mr. Campbell held up a picture of a boy and a girl, and asked "Is these the children?"

Mrs. Ward identified the photographs and then they were passed among the jurymen. Witness now on the stand fifteen minutes.

When Justice Wagner today convened court Attorney Allan B. Campbell for the defence sought to place on the witness stand for cross-examination State Troopers Harry Greene and Ralph Collins, who testified for the State last week.

Greene was in court, but Collins was absent and Mr. Campbell announced that he would not call them until both could be heard at the same time.

WARDD ENTERS WITH WIFE.

The courtroom was crowded with spectators when Ward came in accompanied by his wife, who had spent half an hour with him in the county jail this morning.

After Attorney Campbell announced that he would call the two State troopers later, Attorney-General Sherman, for the prosecution, produced the original receipt given him by Sheriff Werner for the two pistols which Attorney Campbell turned over to him when it was first confessed that Ward was implicated in the killing.

Isaac N. Mills, chief of the defense counsel, objected to the receipt being into the records, but the court overruled him.

FRIEND DEFENDS WARD.

The attorney general then produced a work chart used by Nicholas Klein, an employe of the Bronx garage where Ward's car was repaired after the killing of Peters.

Klein testified that he had not seen broken glass in the car until May 18, 1922, but the defence brought out that the reason he didn't see any previously was because he didn't look in the car.

Then Ernest H. Stolz of New Rochelle, a friend of the Ward family, was called. He said he was at the Ward home on the evening Peters was killed and played cards there from 9 o'clock until 12:30 with Ward's relatives and friends, but that he did not see Ward himself.

He testified that Ward at no time had told him of the circumstances of the death of Peters.

Stolz testified Ward's reputation was good and that he did not know him to have a violent temper.

Defense Attorney Campbell then asked Attorney-General Sherman to produce the pack of playing cards found on Peter's body. Handing these to Stolz Mr. Campbell asked the witness to see if the deck was a complete one and Stolz reported that six cards were missing.

When, after going through the deck, Stolz testified that five of the cards constituted a "straight flush in diamonds" in poker and the jury there was a stir in the courtroom. Stolz admitted that the missing hand was "a pretty good one, one that a poker player gets perhaps once in a thousand times."

PLOT TO FRAME ME, CHARGES O'BRIEN

O'Brien because they are both my friends and are privately friendly with each other," Joseph Seminara, who gave the banquet, told the American.

To this District Attorney O'Brien replied: "Mr. Pelletier and I are not friends, neither privately, officially or any other way. Who ever says we are is not acquainted with the real situation.

"I have in mind the conduct of Mr. Pelletier during the last campaign."

"Joe" Pelletier was at the head of the table. Strangely enough he didn't get the Morris chair.

That was given to Joseph Seminara, court interpreter and "Joe's" good friend.

Robert Robinson

Maurice Caro

Seminara personally invited Mr. O'Brien to attend.

"SMELLED A RAT."

"That's when I smelled a rat," said the district attorney today. "I knew something was rotten in Denmark when a friend of Pelletier's wanted me at a party."

"Ha, ha, this is interesting," laughed Pelletier today when informed by an American reporter of the charges of District Attorney O'Brien relative to the Napoli banquet. He would add nothing further to his remark.

Assistant District Attorney Robinson told the American today he "ducked the banquet" as soon as he could do so after seeing Pelletier enter the hall.

"Mr. Caro left with me," he said. "Neither of us knew Mr. Pelletier was to be there or we would not have attended.

"We believed it to be merely a testimonial banquet to Seminara. There was plenty of booze and red wine there and I saw several of the party under the influence of liquor."

Others felt the same way from accounts of the banquet.

When they saw the former district attorney tuck a napkin in his expanse of vest they left the hotel.

Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of Superior Court was invited but failed to be present.

Among those who did "show" were Assistant District Attorney Robert Robinson and Maurice Caro; former assistant district attorneys Daniel M. Lyons and Thomas D. Lavelle; Standish Wilcox, social secretary to Mayor Curley, several members of the bar and a bevy of lesser political lights.

ONLY ONE SPEECH

The banquet was "not so" modest. It cost $12 per plate including bottles.

It was originally scheduled for a restaurant at No. 140 North street but so many were put "in the know" the restaurant could not hold the crowd, hence the adjournment to the Napoli in Friend street.

SEMINARE PAID FOR IT.

Here are after banquet statements collected today:

Joseph Seminare: "I gave the dinner and paid the check. It cost me $107.50. I originally planned it for a few old and new friends, about twenty in all. It grew to 208.

"I knew two factions would be present, but thought they would leave their political differences outside. Anyone who says I planned it for the benefit of Mr. Pelletier is mistaken.

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Pelletier and Mr. O'Brien, privately, are the best of friends, no matter how they may act publicly."

30 WALKED OUT.

Harry M. Pierce, detective assigned to District Attorney O'Brien's office: "I left when I saw the feeling displayed between the two factions."

Peter McCann, deputy sheriff: "About thirty persons walked out when Mr. Pelletier came in. It was very embarrassing."

Despite that, Mr. Pelletier gave a tenwyes address on his European trip. Thomas D. Lavelle, assistant district attorney under Mr. Pelletier, also spoke.

2 ARE SHOT IN HOLDUP OF GAMBLERS

Randolph, Sept. 24.—Two men were shot and cash and jewelry valued at more than $10,000 stolen when five armed bandits held up sixty gamblers engaged in shooting craps in a lonely house near the State road on the Brockton-Randolph line.

The gamblers were crowding round the dice table where $650 was being paid in bets when an automobile pulled up in front of the house. Several shots were fired, the door was smashed in and five masked men, with automatic pistols in their hands dashed into the room.

A score or more of the gamblers made a rush for the windows but their escape was halted when two of the gun men fired.

John Devins of No. 34 Adams street, Braintree, and another man dropped to the floor with bullets in their bodies. While they lay there two of the bandits lined up the remainder of the gamblers while the others gathered up all the cash and jewelry in sight. Some $5,000 in cash which was being used in the dice game was taken while diamond stick pins and rings, watches and other valuables worth more than $5,000 were also included in the haul.

Less than five minutes after they entered the house the bandits backed out with their loot, jumped into their waiting automobile and sped off. Half a dozen of the gamblers ran out of the place and started their own machines in pursuit but the bandits were successful in eluding them.

Randolph and Brockton police were notified of the hold-up and detachments scoured the surrounding country but were unable to locate the bandits.

Police say that the craps game had evidently been running for some time and they believe that the holdup men had taken part on previous occasions.

Devine was taken to the Norfolk County Tuberculosis Hospital and after emergency treatment was removed to the Quincy City Hospital. The second wounded was carried off by his friends and treated by a local physician. His wounds were slight.

MOTHER PLEADS FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Laura Underhill of No. 111 Audubon road, pleaded today with Judge Arthur W. Dolan in the Suffolk Probate Court for the return of her two daughters who were kidnaped, she says, by her divorced husband, Henry E. Underhill of Hingham.

The children were removed from the home of Mrs. Lescarbo in Waverley. The husband claims they were not receiving proper treatment.

While Underhill's pretty young bride of seven months listened, the first Mrs. Underhill declared that he was not fit to have the custody of the children.

She charged that Underhill's child by his second wife was born five months after their marriage, and that Underhill had got into trouble through misconduct with his brother's wife.

She asked also for the custody of Henry E., Jr., their ten-year-old boy, who was given in charge of Underhill at the time of the divorce.

She admitted she could not care for them without financial help.

"Under your plan, then," said Judge Dolan, "the children would be away from contact not only with their father but from you. They should be brought up together, and I want you to go home and consider some way to bring this about. I do not want to punish you, but we must think of the future of the children."

It was agreed that the three children should be brought into court without their parents next Saturday so that their wishes in the matter could be considered.

KLAN IS FLAYED BY REV. DR. CONRAD

Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad flayed the Ku Klux Klan, pounding with his fist on the rostrum of Pilgrim Hall, today in his address before Congregational ministers, calling that organization a "disgrace to America."

"In England they would not tolerate such a movement," he said. "There is one thing in England we cannot help but respect and that is their allegiance to the law of the country. The idea of any one taking the law in their own hands, like the K. K. K. are doing in this country, is preposterous. Let any one touch the law in England and take the law in their own hands and every other man is against him."

FIVE KILLED IN BALLOON RACE

Lieutenant Wehmen of the Swiss Balloon Corps.

Commandi Barsa, of the Spanish Balloon Polar.

Injuries so serious that he may die were received by Gomez Guillamen, assistant to Barva in the Polar.

The S-6 was caught in the vortex of a terrific southwesterly gale in crossing the Belgian frontier, the rain storm forcing the balloonists to unload all their ballast. When the balloon crashed at Nieteroide both men were dead.

Lieut. Ralph Honeywell

Lieutenant Olmstead was killed outright when lightning struck the balloon, while Lieutenant Chopta suffered death when the S-8 fell.

Two balloons, the United States Navy A-6936 and the Fernande 111, a French entry piloted by G. Blanchet, were the only ones reported up to noon today as having landed safely.

In view of the terrific storm which broke out half an hour after the last balloon took off and which was raging over northern Belgium and Holland and the neighboring North Sea water until late last night, fears are entertained for the safety of the ten balloonists not yet heard from.

These are Blemaine and Ravaine, balloon Picardy, France; Demuyter and Veenstra, balloon Belgica, Belgium; Denville and Spencer, England; Armbruster and Picard, Switzerland; Delasterra and Magdalena, Spain.

MAY END CUP RACES.

The officials of the Brussels Aero Club applied by the catastrophe, point out th t they had advocated postponement of the race, but found that the rules are absolutely inflexible. They still propose changes to overcome the difficulty in future.

Many members, however, favor cancelling the competition altogether.

The third American entrant in the race, the balloon Saint Louis, piloted by Lieutenant Honeywell, never took the air bursting before the start from the pressure of her anchor ropes.

Boston Victim of Race Had Fine Army Record

First Lieutenant Robert S. Olmsted, killed in the international balloon race, was born in Vermont July 4, 1888, and appointed to the aviation service from Massachusetts. He was graduated from the air service airship school in 1921.

He served as a private and sergeant in the First Air Service signal section and enlisted reserve corps from July 27, 1917, to January 8, 1918.

His commission as a lieutenant dates from Sept. 7, 1918. He was highly regarded as an officer and was in line for promotion.

Lieutenant Olmsted was a member of the team which won sixth place in the international balloon race held at Birmingham, England, in 1920. His permanent military station was at the Middletown Air Intermediate Depot at Middletown, Pa.

Lieutenant Shoptaw, the other victim, a native of Kansas, was stationed at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ills. He was one of the first officers to operate an airship on patrol duty along the Mexican border.

Olmsted lived at 30 Washington street, Allsting and is a civil engineer employed by the Boston & Albany railroad at the South station before enlistment.

he had been found in a helpless condition on Park street, Charlestown.

John P. Flavin, 19 years old of No. 9 Gray street, Charlestown, surrendered himself to the police later and was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. He claimed he fought with Daizell, and as a result of a blow the sailor fell to the street, striking his head on the curbstone.

In Charlestown court today Flavin was held for trial on a charge of manslaughter. He was released in $3,000 bail.

PLACED IN CELL

According to information received at the Navy Yard, Dazell was found at 8:15 Saturday evening on Park street, Charlestown, by Patrolman Melvin A. Patterson of Division 1.

The sailor was taken to the police station, where, according to the officer in charge, he refused to give any information about himself. Without subjecting him to a physical examination, Dalzell was placed in a cell and left there, charged with drunkenness.

At 11:10 p. m. Patrolman Whitmore found the sailor unconscious and ordered him taken to the Relief Hospital.

There Dr. Devine found he had a possible fracture of the spine and a broken neck. Dalzell died at 7 a. m. yesterday.

ONE HUNDRED years ago Joseph Smith, prophet, founded the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints." He received from heaven gold plates, mysteriously engraved, and from them, divinely guided, translated the Book of Mormon.

At least, that's his story. His followers say it should not be questioned by Christians, that accept a similar story from Moses, about the tablets of the law.

THESE THAT wisely respect all religions, denying none, are interested especially in the changes that have come over Mormonism, still full of vitality after 100 years. Joseph Smith made a particular virtue of many wives for one man—so did wise King Solomon, by the way.

Modern Mormonism, rallying under the purple, blue and gold banner, "Cumorah-Hamah," says "one wife is enough." That does not mean repudiating Joseph Smith. Many good Christians tone down Jonah and the whale, knowing that the earth is round, do not insist that the four uncles actually stood at the four corners of the earth. All life is a compromise.

H. G. WELLS will now write once a week, telling Americans all about things in general. Lloyd George tells of mistakes that Europe makes, sinking deeper into the war mud. Wells will tell how to make everything perfect, simply by being what we are not and can't possibly be, for ten thousand years, or more.

It would be easy to tell the monkey house inhabitants how to improve their manners—but they don't want to know.

THE HUMAN monkey house will go on, as usual, improving VERY SLOWLY. The big military baboon will chase the weaker little monkeys around and steal their peanuts. When he overeats and gets sick, the little monkeys will bite him.

LLOYD GEORGE'S latest article describes both the Fascismo and Bolshevik movement as a rebellion against "parliamentarism, dilatoriness, confusion of aims, petulance, costly inefficiency."

He compares Cromwell stamping his foot and ordering grim Puritan soldiers to clear the House of Commons with Mussolini, wiping out parliamentary government in Italy.

MUSSOLINI, HOWEVER, will not last as Cromwell lasted, inspiring fear, even when dead. Lloyd George will find a better copy of Mussolini in Rienzi—the real man, not the opera hero.

There was another Mussolini, to the life.

There was in Cromwell a power that actually rules England to this day, although feeble kings sit in his place. Mussolini will be in history an interesting

DEFIES THEM TO PROVE THEIR CHARGES

All Six Whose Affidavits Sought to Defame Her Name Retract Their Statements

Chicago, Sept. 24. — Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, whose divorce suit is pending in New York, faced six persons today in the office of Charles E. Wharton, assistant State's attorney, who is investigating Mrs. Stokes' charge that her husband has sought to defame her character by affidavits obtained here, and defied them to identify her as a former inmate of a notorious "club" in the old Chicago tenderloin.

None of the witnesses could identify Mrs. Stokes as having resided at the club.

When Mrs. Stokes, with her attorney and Mrs. Anna Miseyn of Denver, Col., appeared at the county building at 2:30 p. m., it was announced she had come to face those who had signed affidavits at the instance of W. E. D. Stokes, the wealthy hotel owner, that Mrs. Stokes was known in Chicago's night life district by her maiden name.

"CHANGES WHOLE THING."

Later Mr. Wharton, who previously had been quoted as having said the prosecutors were meeting difficulty in obtaining definite evidence said they were "progressing."

"The new evidence changes the whole thing," Wharton said.

He announced that the county grand jury would have an opportunity to investigate the charges of Mrs. Stokes.

A confession has been obtained from Robert E. Lee, negro special deputy sheriff, that he had been employed to get the affidavits, Mr. Wharton and policemen said, adding that $1,000 found in Lee's possession was dated in August, "bought six affidavits."

Lee, according to Wharton's announcement, said he had been employed by counsel for Stokes last July, together with Joe Bruner, a taxicab driver, and John Rogers and John Scott, waiters.

"It was explained to us that evidence was wanted to show that Mrs. Stokes had been an inmate of the club," Lee was quoted as having told Wharton.

"ALL BUNK," SAYS ONE.

"The first person I asked, a lawyer hatcheckper, told me it was 'all bunk,' but the next six made affidavits.

Frank Hubert, a negro, one of the affiants, admitted to Wharton, the latter said, that the woman he knew was "not Mrs. Stokes at all. She was a little girl with bobbed hair, and her name was Dorothy. Helen."

Another of the affiants, Mrs. Nellie Finnich, an aged negress, said she had been given $10 "to sign a paper, but I can't read and I don't know what was in it."

The names of the other affiants and the texts of the affidavits were withheld by Prosecutor Wharton.

LETTERS GIVEN OUT

Contents of scores of letters said to have been written by Stokes to a Chicago detective agency, which were seized by the State's Attorney, were made public today.

They furnish an insight, according to the methods of the elderly New York financier used to obtain evidence against his pretty wife.

The names of Tex Rickard, fight promoter; Peggy Hopkins Joyce, actress, and Joan Sawyer, dancer, are mentioned in the missives alone with

PEGGY JOYCE.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, divorcee and actress, has become involved in the Stokes case through the attempts of W. E. D. Stokes to secure evidence for his recent divorce suit which is now under profe-ing to the State's Attorney's office, the names of Chicago underworld characters.

In the letters written on stationery bearing Stokes' name, evidence is sought corroborating the millionaire's theory that Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes, his wife, had been an inmate of the Everleigh Club.

ASKED FOR EVIDENCE

In a letter taken by the authorities from the office of Edward W. Aliz, a private detective, and signed with the name of W. E. D. Stokes, the detective is requested to unearth evidence against Mrs. Stokes.

The letter reads:

"While our issues are framed in the divorce case, still I want to get witnesses with evidence and affidavits that show that Mrs. Stokes, as Helen Norwood or Helen Underwood, etc., was an inmate of the Everleigh Club.

"I have a lot of evidence, but I want to get more confirmation through you. I want to show her character so low that she is not a fit person to have charge of the two children.

"Hall Billie said to be a cousin of Mrs. Stokes' already is a co-respondent. Mrs. Stokes has been giving him money in small sums. He is supposed to be an aviator and once was supposed to be a student at Northwestern College at Evanston, and there is a rumor that he was mixed up with some hazing which had serious results.

"I recently got them dead to rights. Now I learn that he and Mrs. S. were seen together in Chicago with two boys, and it would be well to find out if he did not take her to where he boards or lives."

Two letters promise to send photographs to aid in the identification. Another letter, dated August 24, 1923, reads:

"I find our party has been in the habit of buying the finest silk pajamas, costing from $30 to $35 a pair, and the finest silk stockings, costing from $6 to $10, of various sizes, and that she has been doing this from 1912 to 1918. She never has bought any for me or anyone I know of.

"Now find out if Dan Jackson has not any very handsome silk pajamas, and, if possible, if the name of Kaiser and Kase is on them."

Another letter dated August 30 requests Aliz to furnish affidavits. It reads:

"I have no affidavits as yet. A Denver lady, now very well off, and a neighbor of Mrs. S. in Denver and formerly in the Everleigh Club, has given me an affidavit in which she states that Mrs. S. confessed to her that she was examined by Long and Tate.

"Did you find out where Helen Norwood kept her bank account? She kept one.

"You said you know Peggy Hopkins Joyce's husband and that you would see him. He rode in the cars between New York and Chicago with them and another man. What did Joyce say?

TRICK FOOLS WOMAN DOCTOR; ARRESTED ON FRAUD CHARGE

Jonesboro, Ark., Sept. 24—"Send me a single drop of your blood and I will tell you what ails you," was the slogan of Dr. Mary Lecoq, according to government men. This someone played a trick.

A smear of blood sent to Dr. Lecoq brought forth this diagnosis:

"You have cancer of the brain over the left ear, cancer and tuberculosis in each hip joint, kidney disease and some malaria." Dr. Lecoq is credited with having written to the patient.

The patient, however, had sent to the doctor a specimen of blood from a freshly killed young pullet.

The doctor was arrested on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

The defendant is represented by State Senator T. A. Turner, who has a young son who has been treated by Dr. Lecoq. The son's improvement since the doctor began treating him has been marvelous, says counsel for the defense.

AUTOISTS ON TOUR 'FOUND' BY RADIO BROADCAST

The radio as a means of informing motorists "on the road somewhere" was proved successful when Charles S. Hale, driving from New York to Montreal, learned of the serious injury of his nephew, Richard Kaiser, son of Howard R. Kaiser of No. 451 Pearl street, Cambridge. The broadcast message reached him at Littleton, N. H.

The Boston police today again will try to intercept a motorist by radio. He is Floyd Sharpe of New Bedford, who is touring over the Mohawk Trail. His father has been injured.

OPERATE TO SAVE CHILD AS MOTHER IS DYING

Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 24 (I.N.S.)—In a trolley car-automobile collision on the Troy-Schenectady road, four persons were killed and two injured. The dead are: Mrs. Robert Telford, 28; Regina A. Telford, young daughter of Mrs. Telford; Earl Moore, 26; James Laven, 28.

Mrs. Telford lived a short time after reaching Ellis Hospital. In the hope of saving her unborn child, physicians performed a cæsarian operation, but the baby was dead.

KLAN HEAD LED LASHING PARTY

Jewett Is Accused of New Charges in Oklahoma; Crisis Is Near in Klux War

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 24 (A.P.).—The hours separating the Oklahoma legislative and executive clash narrowed down to forty-eight today, with the line drawn taut between Governor J. C. Walton and those members of the House of Representatives who seek to indict him as the preliminary step toward impeachment proceedings.

Today brought more witnesses and more testimony at both the Tulsa and Oklahoma City military courts of inquiry. Charges of riot were expected to be made in Oklahoma City against participants in a lashing party alleged to have been led by N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma Ku Klux Klan.

Jewett's trial on a charge of riot probably will be postponed tomorrow to permit additional information being obtained by the military against other supposed members of the party.

Wednesday noon the House of Representatives is called to meet in extraordinary session, despite the armed guardsmen who still patrol before the bronze doors of House and Senate chambers with loaded rifles and fixed bayonets.

Federal court action seeking a restraining order is threatened by the House members if the executive attempts to block the session by force or throw any of the members in jail for the remainder of his more than three year term in office. The Governor would welcome such a legal test, he said today. Such action may come between now and Wednesday noon, the hour set for the House call.

Governor Walton has assailed the House session as a gathering of "Klan dragons to oust any official who dares to block their path."

ASKS RICH TO GIVE UP FRIVOLITY

Man-Made Law a Failure, She Says, and Her Sex Must Correct the Errors

Colorado Springs, Sept. 24.—Women of the West and women outside of the fetid social sphere of the East must emancipate the sex from man-made law, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont said.

Mrs. Belmont, president of the National Woman's Party, is attending a convention of Colorado women and women representing the Western division of the National party.

Mrs. Belmont was frank and unsparing in her criticism of her Eastern sisters, women notable in social life of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Washington, Mrs. Belmont said.

"For nine years I have been as one crying in the wilderness to women of wealth and leisure to give over their pleasures and frivolities and do something to justify their existence. I have cried in vain. No reform ever appealed to women who have all they want."

THEN SEEKS ELSEWHERE

Then Mrs Belmont said she determined to seek consolace for women who would make the party which she made a real force in the body politic if the nation. She continued:

"Jesus went down among the fishermen, ordained a following and went to work. If He hadn't depended upon members of the so-called "smart set" of the day to help His cause, the world would have been minus Christianity."

Noted for her suffrage work, an announcement from Mrs. Belmont that she had never voted came as a thunder clap. She explained:

"I am very anxious to vote, but

GIRL, 15, TWICE HELD CAPTIVE, SHE SAYS

Esther Burke, fifteen years old, came from Woburn to Boston in July to obtain work in a candy factory. She was in Municipal Court today, charged with being a delinquent child.

With her was Anthony di Meo, who, she said, rescued her after she had been held a prisoner for a week at the home of Josephine Vanocsca and Ralph Amore of Nashua street, West End. They were also in court.

De Meo, the Burke girl told Judge Murray, picked up a note she had tossed from a window and took her from the house.

She accused the Vanocsca woman of luring her there from a roomin house on Snowdoin street, and added that Amore threatened to slash her throat "from ear to ear" if she dared to leave.

But her rescue by De Meo was worse, perhaps, than her detention by the woman and man, she told the court. She finally escaped from him and told her story to the police.

Judge Murray continued the hearing until Friday, and assigned Special Officer Holmes to investigate the case.

LOWELL HIGH SCHOOL ROW ENDED BY COURT

The Lowell high school building controversy ended today when the Supreme Court dismissed the bill in equity of Dennis E. Conners and nine others who sought to prevent alleged illegal expenditure of city funds.

The building was constructed in spite of the court struggle and was finished last September.

The court's opinion declares that the plaintiffs failed to use due diligence and were guilty of negligence in protecting their own legal rights. Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg wrote the opinion.

BAD? YES, BUT SHE WAS GOOD MOTHER

New York, Sept. 24.—The story of a man-eating shark's mother love that caused her to swallow her three young to save them from being caught was told today by passengers on the S. S. Talos, back from Southern ports. The shark swallowed her offspring after she had taken a hook thrown out by someone on board. When she was landed and cut open the young ones were found in her stomach, still alive, according to passengers.

MRS. WARD SOBS ON STAND WHEN CALLED AS MURDER WITNESS

Ward replied that he did. Justice Warner asked the contention of the defense that Mrs. Ward could not be called upon to testify what her husband had said to her.

"Was his explanation satisfactory," asked the prosecutor. "Yes," she replied.

Mrs. Ward was apparently composed as she parried the interrogation, but her voice was so soft that her answers were almost inaudible to the spectators who leaned forward in their chairs to catch every word. At times her answers were so low when she was questioned by Attorney-General Sherman, that the court clerk had to repeat them for the stenographer and the jury.

Still suppressing her sobs, Mrs. Ward testified that when the first grand jury began the investigation of the murder implicating her husband she went to Bermuda.

After she had been there some weeks, she said, she called her husband to know if she could not come home to get her children and go to some other resort. This was arranged, she added, and she took the children to Atlantic City.

To questions of the Attorney-General she answered that she remained there, out of the jurisdiction of New York State, while the last grand jury was re-investigating the killing and preparing the indictment under which her husband now is being tried.

The Attorney-General asked Mrs. Ward if Lola Beryl, the nursemaid, was outside of New York State but still in her employ, and she answered "yes." After Mrs. Ward had said that Mrs. Beryl was a nurse for her children, Mr. Campbell took up a picture of a boy and a girl, and asked "are these the children?"

Mrs. Ward identified the photographs and then they were passed among the jurymen. Witness now on the stand fifteen minutes.

When Justice Wagner today convened court Attorney Allan R. Campbell for the defence sought to place on the witness stand for cross-examination State Troopers Harry Greene and Ralph Collins, who testified for the State last week.

Greene was in court, but Collins was absent and Mr. Campbell announced that he would not call them until both could be heard at the same time.

WARDD ENTERS WITH WIFE.

The courtroom was crowded with spectators when Ward came in accompanied by his wife, who had spent half an hour with him in the county jail this morning.

After Attorney Campbell had announced that he would call the two State troopers later, Attorney-General Sherman, for the prosecution, produced the original receipt given him by Sheriff Werner for the two pistols which Attorney Campbell turned over to him when it was first confessed that Ward was implicated in the killing.

Isaac N. Mills, chief of the defense counsel, objected to the receipt being into the records, but the court overruled him.

FRIEND DEFENDS WARD.

The attorney general then produced a work chart used by Nicholas Klein, an employe of the Bronx garage where Ward's car was repaired after the killing of Peters.

Klein testified that he had not seen broken glass in the car until May 18, 1922, but the defence brought out that the reason he didn't see any previously was because he didn't look in the car.

Then Ernest H. Stolz of New Rochelle, a friend of the Ward family, was called. He said he was at the Ward home on the evening Peters was killed and played cards there from a o'clock until 12:30 with Ward's relatives and friends, but that he did not see Ward himself.

He testified that Ward at no time had told him of the circumstances of the death of Peters.

Stolz testified Ward's reputation was good and that he did not know him to have a violent temper.

Defense Attorney Campbell then asked Attorney-General Sherman to produce the pack of playing cards found on Peter's body. Handing these to Stolz Mr. Campbell asked the witness to see if the deck was a complete one and Stolz reported that six cards were missing.

When, after going through the deck, Stolz testified that five of the cards constituted a "straight flush in diamonds" in poker and the poker there was a stir in the courtroom. Stolz admitted that the missing hand was "a pretty good one, one that a poker player gets perhaps once in a thousand times."

PLOT TO FRAME 2 ARE SHOT IN ME, CHARGES O'BRIEN

O'Brien because they are both my friends and are privately friendly with each other," Joseph Semnara, who gave the banquet, told the American.

To this District Attorney O'Brien replied: "Mr. Pelletier and I are not friends, neither privately, officially or any other way. Who ever says we are is not acquainted with the real situation.

"I have in mind the conduct of Mr. Pelletier during the last campaign."

"Joe" Pelletier was at the head of the table. Strangely enough he didn't get the Morris chair.

That was given to Joseph Semnara, court interpreter and "Joe's" good friend.

Robert Robinson

Maurice Caro

Seminara personally invited Mr. O'Brien to attend.

"SMELLED A RAT."

"That's when I smelled a rat," said the district attorney today. "I knew something was rotten in Denmark when a friend of Pelletier's wanted me at a party."

"Ha, ha, this is interesting," laughed Pelletier today when informed by an American reporter of the charges of District Attorney O'Brien relative to the Napoli banquet. He would add nothing further to his remark.

Assistant District Attorney Robinson told the American today he "ducked the banquet" as soon as he could do so after seeing Pelletier enter the hall.

"Mr. Caro left with me," he said. "Neither of us knew Mr. Pelletier was to be there or we would not have attended.

"We believed it to be merely a testimonial banquet to Seminara. There was plenty of booze and rel when there and I saw several of the party under the influence of liquor."

Others felt the same way from accounts of the banquet.

When they saw the former district attorney tuck a napkin in his expanse of vest they left the hotel.

Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of Superior Court was invited but failed to be present.

Among those who did "show" were Assistant District Attorney Robert Robinson and Maurice Caro; former assistant district attorneys Daniel M. Lyons and Thomas D. Laveile; Standish Wilcox, social secretary to Mayor Curley, several members of the bar and a bevy of lesser political lights.

ONLY ONE SPEECH

The banquet was "not so" modest. It cost $12 per plate including bottles.

It was originally scheduled for a restaurant at No. 140 North street but so many were put "on the know" the restaurant could not hold the crowd, hence the adjournment to the Napoli in Friend street.

SEMINARE PAID FOR IT.

Here are after banquet statements collected today:

Joseph Seminare: "I gave the dinner and paid the check. It cost me $197.00. I originally planned it for a few old and new friends, about twenty in all. It grew to 200.

"I knew two factions would be present, but thought they would leave their political differences outside. Anyone who says I planned it for the benefit of Mr. Pelletier is mistaken.

"As a matter of fact, Mr. Pelletier and Mr. O'Brien, privately, are the best of friends, no matter how they may act publicly."

30 WALKED OUT.

Harry M. Pierce, detective assigned to District Attorney O'Brian's office: "I left when I saw the feeling displayed between the two factions."

Peter McCann, deputy sheriff: "About thirty persons walked out when Mr. Pelletier came in. It was very embarrassing."

Despite that, Mr. Pelletier gave a travelogue address on his European trip. Thomas D. Lavelle, assistant district attorney under Mr. Pelletier, also spoke.

BRONSKY NOW HELD ON BIGAMY CHARGE

John Bronsky's marital difficulties, apparently ended as far as the police were concerned last Friday when he was found not guilty of living with Mrs. Elise Coolidge Illegally remitted in a bigamy charge against him today before Judge West in Roxbury court. Bronsky, who lives at No. 70 Batavia street, Back Bay, was divorced from Mrs. Catherine Bronsky in December, 1922, and married his present wife in March, 1923. That was too soon after the divorce, the police charge. He was held in $2,000 bail.

MOTHER PLEADS FOR CHILDREN

Mrs. Laura Underhill of No. 111 Audubon road, pleaded today with Judge Arthur W. Dolan in the Suffolk Probate Court for the return of her two daughters who were kidnaped, she says, by her divorced husband, Henry E. Underhill of Hingham.

The children were removed from the home of Mrs. Lescarbo in Waverly. The husband claims they were not receiving proper treatment.

While Underhill's pretty young bride of seven months listened, the first Mrs. Underhill declared that he was not fit to have the custody of the children.

She charged that Underhill's child by his second wife was born five months after their marriage, and that Underhill had got into trouble through misconduct with his brother's wife.

She asked also for the custody of Henry E., Jr., their ten-year-old boy, who was given in charge of Underhill at the time of the divorce.

She admitted she could not care for them without financial help.

"Under your plan, then," said Judge Dolan, "the children would be away from contact not only with their father but from you. They should be brought up together, and I want you to go home and consider some way to bring this about. I do not want to punish you, but we must think of the future of the children."

It was agreed that the three children should be brought into court without their parents next Saturday so that their wishes in the matter could be considered.

KLAN IS FLAYED BY REV. DR. CONRAD

Rev. Dr. A. Z. Conrad flayed the Ku Klux Klan, pounding with his fist on the rostrum of Pilgrim Hall, today in his address before Congregational ministers, calling that organization a "disgrace to America."

"In England they would not tolerate such a movement," he said. "There is one thing in England we cannot help but respect and that is their allegiance to the law of the country. The idea of any one taking the law in their own hands, like the K. K. K. are doing in this country, is preposterous. Let any one touch the law in England and take the law in their own hands and every other man is against him."

FIVE KILLED IN BALLOON RACE

Lieutenant Wehmer of the Swiss Balloon Geneva.

Penaranda Baron, of the Spanish Balloon Polar.

Injuries so serious that he may die were received by Gomez Guillamon, assistant to Baron in the Polar.

The S-6 was caught in the vortex of a terrific southwesterly gale in crossing the Belgian frontier. The rain storm forcing the balloonists to unload all their ballast. When the balloon crashed in Nieleode No. 15 men were dead.

Lieut. Ralph Honeywell

Lieutenant Olmsted was killed outright when airplane struck the balloon, while Lieutenant Chopta's horrified death when the S-6 fell.

Two balloons, the Belted States Navy A-6699, and the Fernande 111, from a French entry, piloted by G. Blanchet, were the only ones reported up to noon today as having landed safely.

In view of the terrific storm which broke out half an hour after the last balloon took off and which was raging over northern Belgium and Holland and the neighboring North Sea water until late last night, fears are entertained for the safety of the ten balloonists not yet heard from.

These are Benaiene and Ravaine, balloon Picardy, France; Dennuyter and Vicentra, balloon Belgica, Belgium; Durelle and Spooner, England; Armbruster and Picard, Switzerland; Delaserra and Magdalena, Spain.

MAY END CUP RACES.

The officials of the Brussels Aero Club applied by the catastrophe, point out that they had advocated postponement of the race, but found that the rules are absolutely inflexible. They will propose changes to overcome this difficulty in future.

Many members, however, favor cancelling the competition altogether.

The third American entrant in the race, the balloon Saint Louis, piloted by Lieutenant Honeywell, never took the air, bursting before the start from the pressure of her anchor ropes.

Boston Victim of Race Had Fine Army Record

First Lieutenant Robert S. Olmsted, killed in the international balloon race, was born in Vermont July 18, 1886, and appointed to the aviation service from Massachusetts. He was graduated from the air service airship school in 1921.

He served as a private and sergeant in the Signal Reserving signal section and enlisted reserve corps from July 27, 1917, to January 8, 1918.

His commission as a lieutenant dates from Sept. 7, 1918. He was highly regarded as an officer and was in line for promotion.

Lieutenant Olmsted was a member of the team which won sixth place in the international balloon race held at Birmingham, Ala., in 1920. His permanent military station was at the Middletown Air Intermediate Depot at Middletown, Pa.

Lieutenant Shoptaw, the other victim, a native of Kansas, was stationed at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ills. He was one of the first officers to operate an airship on patrol duty along the Mexican border.

Olmsted lived at 83 Washington street, Allston and is a civil engineer employed by the Boston & Albany railroad at the South station before enlistment.

Injuries so serious that he may die were received by Gomez Guillamon, assistant to Baron in the Polar.

The S-6 was caught in the vortex of a terrific southwesterly gale in crossing the Belgian frontier. The rain storm forcing the balloonists to unload all their ballast. When the balloon crashed in Nieleode No. 15 men were dead.

Lieut. Ralph Honeywell

Lieutenant Olmsted was killed outright when airplane struck the balloon, while Lieutenant Chopta's horrified death when the S-6 fell.

Two balloons, the Belted States Navy A-6699, and the Fernande 111, from a French entry, piloted by G. Blanchet, were the only ones reported up to noon today as having landed safely.

In view of the terrific storm which broke out half an hour after the last balloon took off and which was raging over northern Belgium and Holland and the neighboring North Sea water until late last night, fears are entertained for the safety of the ten balloonists not yet heard from.

These are Benaiene and Ravaine, balloon Picardy, France; Dennuyter and Vicentra, balloon Belgica, Belgium; Durelle and Spooner, England; Armbruster and Picard, Switzerland; Delaserra and Magdalena, Spain.

INJURED SAILOR IN CELL

he had been found in a helpless condition on Park street, Charlestown.

John P. Slavin, 19 years old of No. 9 Gray street, Charlestown, surrendered himself to the police later and was arrested on a charge of manslaughter. He claimed he fought with Daizell, and as a result of a blow the sailor fell to the street, striking his head on the curbstone.

In Charlestown court today Slavin was held for trial on a charge of manslaughter. He was released in $3,000 bail.

PLACED IN CELL.

According to information received at the Navy Yard, Dazell was found at 6:45 Saturday evening on Park street, Charlestown, by Patrolman Melvin A. Patterson of Division 1.

The sailor was taken to the police station, where, according to the officer in charge, he refused to give any information about himself. Without subjecting him to a physical examination, Dalzell was placed in a cell and left there, charged with drunkenness.

At 11:10 p. m. Patrolman Whitney found the sailor unconscious and ordered him taken to the Relief Hospital.

There Dr. Devine found he had a possible fracture of the spine and a broken neck. Dalzell died at 7 a. m. yesterday.

Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., Picked for Today's "Who's News"

By BETTY ALDEN.

A LEADING member of the younger married set along the Shore is Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr., of the Beverly Farms colony, whom we add today to our "Who's News Along the North Shore."

The former Eleanor Fabyan, daughter of the Francis Wright Fabyans—is most attractive, with her good looks and slender figure always smartly gowned. She has fluffy hair and a slightly retrousse nose and belongs to the type generally referred to as "feminine."

Ever since her debut she has sung and danced her way through the Vincent Club shows, one year she played the part of a sub-deb and the year after she was married she lead the famous "octette," the honored feature of the Vincent Club shows, the members of which are picked for their particularly good looks and talent.

When Mrs. Horatio Nelson Slater (Mabel Hunt) gave her long-to-be-remembered "Cotton Ball," the then Miss Frothingham took a leading part.

It was in 1915 that the charming Boston girl became the bride of young Frothingham, a Harvard '12 man and former player on the Crimson footbal team. A large contingent came on for the wedding from Philadelphia, the groom's city.

Among the bride's attendants for the smart ceremonial were the talented Louise McAllister, who's Mrs. Nevil Ford now and lives in New York, as well as the Misses Jane Peters, Frances Webster and Margaret Weld. The maid of honor was her sister, Miss Edith Fabyan, who is now Mrs. William A. Reed of New York.

Mr. Frothingham's two brothers, Thomas and Huntington Wolcott, were both players on the Crimson eleven. It will be remembered that Huntington Frothingham last year married Mrs. Marie Lee Turner.

In the Winter time Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frothingham, Jr. make their home at No. 19 Commonwealth avenue. All the year-round, whether in town or on the shore, the former Eleanor Fabyan is a willing charity worker.

AN important wedding of the week will be the marriage of Miss Geraldine Clark to Tom Proctor Mandell to take pace on Saturday at high noon in St. Paul's Church, Brookline.

The prospective bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Clark of Beacon street. Her fiance, the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Snell Mandell, is one of the crack players on the Myopia polo team.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID C. PERCIVAL of Commonwealth avenue and Marblehead Neck, are to spend the Winter in travels abroad. The younger daughter, Miss Constance Percival, one of the youngest and most skilled yachtswomen along the shore, will attend school near Paris. David C. Percival, Jr., will return to his studies in Groton.

CITY COUNCIL IS OPPOSED TO FARE BOOST

The request of railroads serving Massachusetts that they be granted a 20 per cent increase in twelve-ride and commutation tickets should be denied, Boston's City Council said today, voting unanimously on a resolution to that effect.

Copies of the resolutions will be sent along to Governor Cox and members of the Public Utilities Commission, who shortly will act upon the railroads' request.

Council met with a message from Mayor Curley branding the railroads' desire as "an opening wedge for the ultimate forfeiting upon New England of a project for State aid to steam railroads in the same manner that aid was provided the Boston Elevated."

"Deny the request," the Mayor advised council. "It will be a burden to the people. Such increase has neither been approved nor requested on railroad systems outside New England."

The council's resolution said:

"Be it and it is hereby resolved that in the opinion of the City Council of Boston conditions do not justify an increase at this time in either commutation or twelve ride rates which at present obtain on the railroad systems operating in Massachusetts, and, be it further resolved that in the opinion of the Boston City Council the proposal submitted by the railroads operating in Massachusetts to the Public Utilities Commission should be denied."

SCHUYLER PARSONS DIVORCED IN PARIS

Paris, Sept. 24.—Mrs. Schuyler Parsons, formerly Miss Betty Bierne Pierson, widely known New York society girl, has been granted a decree of divorce from her husband by the courts.

Last June it was rumored among friends that a divorce had been asked for. Mrs. Parsons was one of New York's noted beauties before her marriage, she was one of the famous "beautiful Pierson sisters." Her husband is a Harvard graduate.

GENERAL ELECTRIC PROTESTS FARE BOOST FOR EMPLOYES

Because about 275 of their workers are affected by the proposed increase of 20 per cent. in railroad fares, the General Electric Company of Pittsfield has requested the State Department of Public Utilities to notify it of the date of the hearing.

Residents of Billerica and Salem and the Sharon Improvement Society have added their protests to the big volume receive by the department.

The first party heard from in favor of the proposed increase is Clarence S. Lauriston, treasurer of the American Stay Company of Boston. He writes that he considers the increase necessary because of the heavy labor costs imposed upon the railroads by the Adamson bill.

That dingy film on teeth

See the new beauty come

This test has shown millions the way to whiter, cleaner teeth. The results are quick and apparent.

They have led dainty people of some 50 nations to clean their teeth in this new way. Now you should learn how much it means to you.

It fights film

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. You can feel it now. Much of it resists the tooth brush's rings and stays.

Soon that film discolors, then forms dingy coats. That is why teeth become clouded.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in film. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. That is why tooth troubles are almost universal with people who do not fight film.

You can do it now

Dental science has in late years found ways to fight that film. One acts to disintegrate the film at all stages of formation. The other removes it without harmful scouring. These methods were proved by many careful tests. Then a new-type tooth paste was perfected to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Now this new method has come into world-wide use. Leading dentists everywhere advise it.

Teeth feel clean

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also its starch digestant. Those are there to neutralize acids and digest starch deposits on teeth. Pepsodent gives them manifold effects.

Thus Pepsodent brings to users more than whiter teeth. It brings multiplied protection. And without any harmful grit.

Save their teeth

Pepsodent is more important to children than adults. Their teeth are most subject to film attacks, and the results often last for life.

Make this test for your sake and your family's sake. See the whiter teeth it brings. Feel the cleaner teeth. Then decide for yourself if those in your home should have these benefits continually.

In one week you will know beyond doubt. Cut out coupon now.

SCRUBWOMAN WILLS HOSPITAL $1,400 FOR BED

There'll soon be a new little white crib in Children's Hospital.

Above it will be placed a tablet on it inscribed these words: "Kate Lucy Walsh."

Folks will go in and out of the babies' ward from day to day, pass that little crib, scan the tablet and read that also. If officials could have sound records on the tablet what might make folks pause. It would be the story of Kate Walsh.

Once upon a time she was happily married. She had three babies. One by one they died. Her husband died also. Kate Walsh was left with an empty cupboard and a heavy heart. She went out to scrub. She became a charwoman, one of those heavy, footed persons with tired eyes and pale-pinkish faces you see in the financial districts of great cities at hours when more fortunate folks are rolling over for their second sleep.

Only Kate Walsh didn't look sad. She smiled and sang. Some day she would join her three angels in Heaven. She died the other day—alone and cold. When her body had gone to its last resting place somebody found that Kate Walsh had left $1,400. Also a note. Read it.

"Give the money in the treasurer of the Children's Hospital for a crib in memory of my three darlings."

(Signed) "KATE WALSH."

"Today the women, whose memory is to be celebrated at this convention here in Colorado Springs, seek to obtain recognition, the ballot and the Nineteenth Amendment as human beings first and women afterwards."

Answering her own question, Mrs. Belmont said:

"I am a human being."

Then Mrs. Belmont went on:

"For twenty centuries men have made a muddling job of this world and its government. We are going to have work for the home, the family, the parents, the children, and for those who are friendless, weak and suffering from injustice.

SPOILED AND VICIOUS KIDDIES CURED AT "BEHAVIOR" CLINICS

PARENTS ARE OFTEN TO BLAME

State Doctors Diagnose Mental Twists of Children at Hub Stations

By GRACE DESCHAMPS.

From the sheltered homes of Beacon Hill to the tenements of the North and South Ends, kiddies with a twist in their mental make-ups that threaten later unhappiness to the child and to society, are having the quirks pulled out with the same efficacy as tonsils and adenoids and bad teeth.

So noteworthy have been the results achieved by the behavioristic clinics of the Community Health Association, under the direction of Dr. D. A. Thom, that the State of Massachusetts, in its department of hygiene, is establishing similar clinics throughout the entire State.

Will the prisons go out of business?

"We don't make any such claim," asserts Dr. Thom, who is a widely known psychiatrist and who is on the staff of the Boston Psychopathic Hospital, "but we know that extraordinary changes are taking place in undisciplined children, and that with the growth of such treatment, definite improvement is bound to mark the succeeding generations."

CLINICS ARE FREE.

The uncivilized child who later becomes the uncivilized adult, says Dr. Thom, is the individual whose main consideration is himself; who holds in contempt or disregards the rest of humanity, and goes through life stepping on other people's toes with his thumb on his nose to the protests of society.

"This individual frequently becomes a criminal, the misfit of society," Dr. Thom declared. "He labors under some mental defect that has not been mitigated by training and the development of inhibitions."

And so, your kiddo who flys into a tantrum of temper, or quarrels with his brothers, or is markedly jealous of the other children, or is selfish or steals or lies—can be painless made into a self-controlled little citizen and it doesn't cost you anything.

PARENTS OFTEN TO BLAME.

Diagnoses just as carefully reached as those in a difficult physical disease, are made every day at the Boston clinics.

"Sometimes these traits are the result of the parents' conduct," says Dr. Thom. "Frequently, in the case of a restless child, we find that the parents unconsciously have aggravated that condition by fondling another child too much in the sight of the 'patient.'

"A pugnacious child—cocky, self-assured and carrying a chip on his shoulder, is frequently suffering from a sense of inferiority and his aggressiveness is part of his natural inclination to compensate.

"When the parents learn what is responsible for the child's traits, constructive treatment begins immediately. And parents, by the way, are invariably willing to go to any measures for their children's well-being. Despite its frequent shortcomings, the home is indisputably the most effective agency for the training of the child.

OFTEN PHYSICAL CAUSE.

"Spiritual training in the home is an incalculable advantage in building the child's character, personality and developing his mental side.

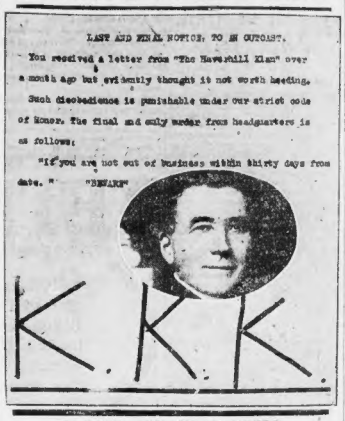
"The mental treatment and training of children begins in some cases in the clinics when the child is only a year and a half old.

Incidentally, educators, psychologists and physiologists all over the mental defect can be traced to a physical cause, and in such cases the clearing up of the physical condition corrects the fault.

"Environment, undoubtedly, is one of the greatest factors affecting the mental outlook of the child. He is an imitator and does as he sees others. We are not underestimating heredity in the least, but we are learning that more and more the conduct of the child's parents and home conditions are the immediate factors to be reckoned with in his treatment."

Incidentally, educators, psychologists and physiologists all over the country are observing the clinics and their adoption is being urged in several cities.

"WARNING NOTE" SENT TO HAVERHILL BAKER



T. LANG AND "KLAN NOTE"

JEALOUS GIRLS BLAMED FOR 'KLAN' THREAT

Haverhill, Sept. 24. — Thomas Lang, fifty-year-old bakery proprietor, of No. 3 Forest avenue, has turned a "Ku Klux Klan" letter over to the police after worrying about it for several days.

Lang is worried but the police and Lang's friends believe he is the victim of practical jokers. It seems that Lang has been forced to ask a number of young girls to keep out of his bakery because of their "taking ways," while loitering around his pastry counter.

"Some people have talked because I have allowed many young women to come into my shop to use the telephone," said Lang, "but it is none of their business. They always come in crowds of five and six at a time. No one of them ever comes in alone. The girls I have kept out because they help themselves to pastry are probably jealous."

This is the third warning message Lang has received purporting to come from the Klan.

AUTO TURNS TURTLE, ROXBURY MAN HURT

One man was injured when an automobile operated by Charles M. Gosso of No. 248 Broadway, Lawrence, skidded on the wet pavement in Summer street, Arlington, and turned turtle twice. The machine was wrecked. Gosso was not hurt, but Thomas L. Foley of No. 77 Bromley street, Roxbury, riding in the car, suffered a scalp wound.

TEST SANITY OF NORTH STATION ATTACKER

Dominic Ianella, No. 18 Bowdoin street, West End, who endangered the lives of scores of persons and caused a panic in the North station when he shot and probably fatally wounded Samuel L. Riberio, No. 4 Bolton street, yesterday, will be examined by a court alienist. It was ordered by Judge Murray in Municipal Court today.

Dominic Ianella.

Ianella is held in $6,000 bail. Riberio is in a dangerous condition at the Relief Hospital.

The shooting is thought to have been the result of a black hand vendetta begun in Italy years ago. Riberio is known as Samuel Lewis in Hudson and his children are registered for school in that name.

Scores of passengers scrambled for cover when Ianella shot Riberio, rushed to a stairway and fired several more bullets at him from his elevated position. He took refuge in an office in the station and fired two more shots at police who discovered his hiding place.

ROBB BATTLE GOES OVER A DAY

Whether or not Dr. William M. Robb, Back Bay physician charged with murder in the famous Tyngsboro suitcase tragedy will go free because of a faulty indictment or remain in East Cambridge jail will not be known until tomorrow.

Arguments his counsel John P. Feeley were to make in court today will not be given until Tuesday. Neither will Judge McLeod's decision as to whether or not Dr. Robb can have a new jury trial relative to the murder indictment which his attorney charges is illegal.

Dr. Robb is charged with the murder of Mrs. Alice Wolschendorf, whose dismembered body was found in two suitcases in the Merrimac river near Tyngsboro on September 1 and 2 last. Dr. Dalvah H. Swope of Brockton, is charged with being an accessory.

The legal battle centering around Dr. Robb and Dr. Swope was to be renewed at 2 o'clock today in East Cambridge Court before Judge McLeod.

WORKERS MAKE MORE "REAL MONEY" NOW

New York, Sept. 24—With living costs higher than in 1914, but lower than July three years ago, American workmen are today making more "real money," computed on the basis of what their wages will buy, than at any other time since before the war.

This was the substance of two research reports made public by the National Industrial Conference Board. Rept increases were the most notable in the average family budget, being 75 per cent. higher than in 1914 and 4 per cent. above the high figures prevalent in the Spring of 1921.

BURIAL OF NEW ENGLAND WAR VETS AS PAUPERS IS PROTESTED

CONGRESSMAN ROGERS ASKS U. S. FOR CEMETERY LAND

Lowell, Sept. 24.—Declaring that New England war veterans who die without money are being buried in paupers' graves, Congressman John Jacob Rogers in a letter to Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, who is also chairman of the National War Weeks, urges more adequate provision for soldiers' burial expenses and the establishment of a national cemetery in Massachusetts.

An intolerable situation now exists, according to Congressman Rogers. Men who wore their country's uniform and fought for her preservation, he asserts, must, if they lack funds, be interred in something very closely akin to the Potters' Field.

Two solutions are pointed out—the appropriation by Congress of a sum available for the purchase of suitable burial lots for veterans who die without funds or the purchase or seizure by the Secretary of War of such land as may be necessary for a national cemetery in New England, as authorized by law.

Although there are now 83 national cemeteries in the United States there is not a single such cemetery within the borders of the six New England States, Congressman Rogers says.

"I cannot see why," he continues, "Arkansas should have three such cemeteries, and States like Montana, New Mexico and Florida one or more each, while the six States constituting New England have none."

Massachusetts is selected by the Congressman as the most appropriate location for the national cemetery, in view of its central location and the fact that at least one-half of the veterans of New England reside within the borders of this State.

MISS ANNA LOGUE.

ANNA LOGUE TO WED N. Y. GEM MERCHANT

Miss Anna Logue of Medford, pretty actress who gained considerable notoriety when she sought to avenge the death of her sister Grace, for which Dr. Michael M. Stevens of Woburn was tried and acquitted of manslaughter, is soon to become a bride in New York.

John M. Francis, a wealthy jeweler of Malden Lane, New York, is to become Miss Logue's husband after a brief romance which began while Miss Logue was performing in a musical show in New York a year ago.

Miss Logue made the announcement of her betrothal just before leaving Boston today to join her company, one of Al. H. Woods' big musical comedy productions in which the pretty young Medford actress has a prominent part.

When Grace Logue was found dead from morphine poisoning in the offices of Dr. Michael Stevens in Woburn, Anna Logue, then filling a theatrical engagement in Montreal, hurried home to investigate her sister's untimely death.

Soon after her arrival here she charged Dr. Stevens with murdering her sister. For weeks the young actress devoted herself to the task of securing evidence in the case.

Cigaret Smokers Who Inhale, 'Hurt Heart and Health'

Erlangen, Bavaria, Sept. 24.—Cigaret smokers who inhale take eight times as much nicotine into their system as those who do not draw the fumes into their lungs, according to Professor R. Heinz of Erlangen University. The reason why pipe-smoking is often less baneful in its effects is that they seldom take the smoke into their lungs. Dry cigars are far less poisonous than damp cigars, according to Professor Heinz.

The serious consequences of excessive cigaret smoking is that habitual users of large quantities of cigarets daily take the smoke into their lungs with baneful effects upon the heart and health.

BAR CHARACTER PROBERS MEET

The committee on character, a new antiseptic for the Suffolk County Bar, went into session today at the courthouse.

Many newly-made lawyers, male and female, appeared at a private meeting of the committee which was organized to keep the morality unfit from becoming attorneys in Suffolk County. It is said to be an outgrowth of the disclosures of recent bar history.

The committee, a sub-committee of the bar examiners, comprises Richard W. Hale (chairman), Charles S. Hill, A. K. Cohen and Miss Elizabeth M. Taylor.

COX APPEARS IN FAVOR OF RAIL COMBINE

Governor Cox was the first witness at the Interstate Commerce Commission's hearing today at Ford Hall on the plan for consolidation of New England railroads.

"The sentiment in Massachusetts and New England is overwhelmingly in favor of consolidation into one New England system," he said.

Governors of other New England States or their representatives and 450 business men and representatives of chambers of commerce and manufacturers' associations were on hand to speak. Most of them appeared to favor the one-system plan.

The object of the hearing was to ascertain whether New England sentiment favored local consolidation or continued separation of the roads and tying-up with the great trunk lines west of the Hudson river.

OPPOSED BY BROWN.

Joseph B. Eastman, Henry C. Hall and Frederick I. Cox of the Commission compose the sub-committee appointed to hear witnesses.

Governor Fred H. Brown of New Hampshire was the only New England governor to oppose the New England system plan which was recommended by the Storrow committee, appointed by the governors of New England last June.

Governor Brown said sentiment in his State was against any consolidation at all, but if it had to come, they favored linking the "weak New England" lines with the stronger trunk lines. He said New Hampshire would never consent to leading financial assistance, as recommended in the Storrow report.

Professor William Z. Ripley of Harvard, railroad expert, requested Brown to submit to cross-examination, but he refused.

BAXTER HOLDS BACK.

Governor Charles A. Templeton of Connecticut said: "Freedom of competition and routing is vital to Connecticut and New England." He said he represented 800 large manufacturers.

Governor Percival P. Baxter of Maine in a letter to the sub-committee said he reserved judgment on the plans inasmuch as other plans were being formulated.

Stanley C. Bullard of the Connecticut State Chamber of Commerce, E. Kent Hubbard, president of the Connecticut Manufacturers' Association; Edward O. Goss of Waterbury Manufacturers' Association, and Alpheus Windsor of the Bridgeport district manufacturers also spoke.

Governor William S. Flynn of Rhode Island said that sentiment in his State was definitely in favor of a New England system.

little incident, useful perhaps in that he saved Italy from disastrous partition, by substituting humiliating subjection to an untrained will. Cromwell will live as a magnificent servant of democracy.

DISPATCHES FROM Moscow say Bolshevism believes the time has come to draw Germany into "Red revolution."

Russia is prepared to back Germany in the inevitable war against neighboring "Plutocratic States."

You cannot believe much that purports to come from Moscow, and forty years of training in sociology should save Germany from a final disaster. But hunger and despair make everything possible.

FRANCE AND England should know how to prevent the final catastrophe. If it comes, it will cost France more than all the billions dreamed of in reparations. It will be a fight to the death between the Lenin and Mussolini ideas of government. To say that England will be puzzled, believing in neither and torn between the two is putting it mildly.

And once the thing starts it will be, as in Russia and Italy, too late to turn back.

CASSANDRA, returning to life, would find savage competition in dismal prophesying. Senator Borah "yields to no man" when it comes to seeing trouble. And the worst of it is he sees clearly. It is all about the farmer; "The scene of our most important economic problem is the farm. The man with the most serious outlook is the American farmer."

Mr. Borah says "more than two million people left the farm in 1922, and it is estimated that more than three million will leave in 1923."

AT THAT RATE, who will supply food for the nation ten years hence? Would it not be wise to let in agricultural immigrants that our laws shut out to make farming profitable for farmers now here, ought to be the business of government and law-makers—at present concentrated on making railroad stocks pay dividends. But if nothing better can be done, foreign farmers should be admitted—otherwise the millions of farmers, drifting to cities, will starve with the rest of us.

"THE JAPANESE government is sounding out American bankers, with a view to floating a loan of one thousand million dollars."

Ten millions, given through the Red Cross, do very well, as proof of sympathy, but it takes real money, thousands of millions, to undo an earthquake's work.

THE money should be lent to Japan by our government, if the bankers cannot manage it. But if the loan to Japan is made, a reasonable part should be spent here. Pittsburgh and Gary can supply steel that Japan will need for earthquake proof building. The great saw mill region of the Northwest coast can supply the timber.

In arranging for the loan, arrangements should be made to spend it among American workmen and American business men.

For this country to supply the money, with other countries supplying the goods, would not be so desirable. If the money is to be spent in Europe, Europe should lend it.

THE Rev. Basil E. Newton, of Oklahoma, tells the Ku Klux Klan in West Virginia that the Klan has 227 members in the House of Representatives. Dr. Churchman, head of the local Klan, adds that there were five members of the Klan in President Harding's Cabinet. The Rev. Newton amazed his audience with the statement that a Ku Klux initiation had taken place in the White House dining room.

VERY interesting assertions, and some allowance must be made for enthusiasm leading to exaggeration. There was certainly no Klan initiation in the White House, if the President there knew it.

A member of the Cabinet told this writer that, in his opinion, at least half of the lower House is affiliated with the Ku Klux.

SEEK MARRIED MAN AS SLAYER OF SCHOOL GIRL

EX-SUITOR SUSPECTED IN JERSEY MURDER

Arrests Near in Brutal Killing of Emma Dickson While on Auto Ride

By Universal Service

Millville, N. J., Sept. 24.—Suspicion turned today to a married man, the owner of a motor car and a scratched face, as the slayer of Emma Dickson, fifteen-year-old high school girl, whose body was found under a clump of bushes near here.

A relative of Miss Dickson, one of three men under suspicion, has been eliminated, the detectives said.

They declined to reveal the names of the other two, one of whom is married, and the other a former sweetheart of the girl.

The married man, police say, persisted in advances toward the girl, despite protests of herself and her parents.

Her fear of him became so great, following a motor ride on which she said he threatened to kill her, according to friends to whom the girl revealed her distress at least six weeks before her murder, that she refused to walk alone at night, not even daring to attend a party given by a girl friend unless arrangements were made for someone to escort her.

A circumstance believed to be even more damning came to light today.

HUB CAP EVIDENCE

Near the spot where the girl's body was found, and at the place where the girl's torn petticoat was discovered, police declared, was found the blood and hair-covered hub-cap from the motor car wheel.

It was from the same kind of a car driven by the married man under suspicion.

And it indicates, according to investigators, that the girl probably rode to the scene with the person who murdered her, having gladly accepted a ride toward home from the dairy office to which she had gone on an errand.

SLAYER KNOWN.

When seen today, it was declared, the young married man's face was scratched. No one has asked him to account for the disfigurations.

County Detective Lore added another sensation to the mystery when he declared:

"The identity of the murderer is known and an arrest will be made within forty-eight hours."

With only her father, Benjamin Dickson, there to weep over the grave, the body of the unfortunate girl was buried in the churchyard of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Port Elizabeth, N. J., the father, Thompson Dickson, fifty-five, did not attend the services.

ATTORNEY JOSEPH LUNDY PASSES AWAY

Joseph Lundy, Boston attorney, and personal counsel to Mayor Curley, died today at Young's Hotel after a brief illness with pneumonia.

He sustained a severe cold, and a week ago collapsed, being placed under a doctor's care in the hotel, where he had been living. It was thought that his condition was improving, when he sustained a setback Saturday night. He leaves a wife and two children, a son and daughter.

Mr. Lundy, who was in his 51st year, has been a Curley man off and on for twenty years, although he was a Republican candidate for the Republican nomination for district attorney in Suffolk County in 1919.

Joseph Lundy

He is survived by a widow, a son, Joseph F. Lundy, a daughter, Audrey, and two brothers, Frederick and Constantine Lundy of Boston. The funeral will be held from the family residence, No. 368 Longwood avenue, Roxbury.

BABY SHOW OFFICES ARE STORMED

Mothers Anxious to Enter Their Offspring Turn Out En Masse at City Hall

Offices of the Boston Health Show in City Hall Annex were stormed by mothers today anxious to enroll their babies in the Better Babies' Conference of show to be held in Mechanics Building from October 6 to 13.

More than 2,000 applications were received. Each mother had a coupon from the Boston American properly filled out.

This conference will not be a baby show in the usual sense of the word, but will be a scientific cooperative effort to impress upon the public the wisdom of prompt attention to any defects in baby health.

In other cities fully 85 per cent. of the babies which have been examined in the health conference have shown defects which the family physician could remedy.

PRIZES FOR BEST BABIES.

To encourage mothers who are bringing up babies most efficiently the health associations which are co-operating in the Boston Health Show have offered prizes for the twenty-one children who score nearest to perfection in nine divisions made according to age from six months to six years.

These prizes will be bank accounts of from $5.00 to $20.00, which will be opened in local savings institutions in the names of the winning children. There will be a silver cup for the mother of the baby with the highest score of all.

TEST IN GLASS HOUSE.

Each afternoon of the health show in a large glass walled examination house, 90 feet long by 30 feet wide, the examinations will go on in the view of the spectators of the show. The babies and their mothers will enter the baby house at a time ap-

SYRIA DEMANDS TURK RULE; RESENTS CONTROL BY FRANCE

London, Sept. 24.—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Constantinople today says it has been learned from Anatolia that the situation in the region of Aleppo, Syria, has become grave, with ninety-five per cent. of the population demanding full restoration to Turkey. Syria, a former province of Turkey in Asia, 75 miles southwest of Aleppo, was made an independent State after the war and placed under French mandate.)

A military council presided over by General Weygand, French High Commissioner in Syria, is reported to have decided to abandon Aleppo in case of danger and to establish a new line of defence in front of Hama.

FAMOUS ARTICLE X REVISED; NATIONS FREE TO DODGE WAR

Geneva, Sept. 24. (A.P.)—The League of Nations assembly today discussed the report of the judicial commission favoring a resolution supplying interpretation of the famous article X of the League covenant. By this resolution each State would have the exclusive right to determine to what degree, if any, military assistance would be afforded another country when attacked.

The council of the League could only suggest the nature of the assistance. The members would not, therefore, be committed to assuming territorial integrity of other members to the extent of employing their fleets and armies.

MANY PERSIAN TOWNS RUINED BY EARTHQUAKE; SCORES DEAD

Teheran, Persia, Sept. 24. (A.P.)—Several villages in the vicinity of Rujnurd are reported to have been destroyed, with casualties as far as known of 123 dead and about 100 injured, in the earthquake which shook the region last Thursday, say dispatches reaching here today. The shocks are continuing.

Damage is also reported in the district of Shirvan.

IDENTIFIES EMMONS 'PLOTTER'

Youth Charged by Society Leader With Blackmail Is of Ancient Family

"The Foggs came over from England in 1630. They're older than the Emmons family, just as good—and probably better."

So said Mrs. Annie Fogg, No. 14 Francis street, Quincy, a prominent member of one of the oldest families in New England, when questioned relative to the alleged blackmail and poison pen activities of Lester Fogg, alias Arthur LeBaron, who it has been discovered is her son.

Fogg is charged with having tried to obtain $10,000 from Mrs. Nathaniel Franklin Emmons, prominent Boston society leader, whose war activities won for her the title, "Angel of the Yankee Division." Fogg, it is charged, made an appointment with Mrs. Emmons in a Boston hotel, and demanded the money under threat of publishing certain supposed letters of a defamatory character.

He was arrested under the name of LeBaron. Police learned he was known under many aliases. The Boston Americas traced LeBarron's activities, and learned his true identity and address. He is an advertising man. Most of his business has been transacted in Eastern Massachusetts.

"Lester is my youngest son," Mrs. Fogg told the Boston American. "I hope there is some mistake, and that LeBaron is not Lester.

"It would be no greater shock to have Lester brought home dead than to learn that he has so soiled the family name. We are an old family. We have always been proud of our name."

MANY SLAIN IN NEW GERMAN RIOTING

Berlin, Sept. 24 (I.N.S.)—Riots and killings were reported from various quarters of Germany today.

Five persons were killed and eleven wounded in fighting between police and Communists near Wiederitsch.

One was killed and many wounded in Dresden. Mounted police were overpowered when they tried to restore order. Later they gained the upper hand.

Six workers and two policemen were wounded at Glesiwitz.

At Lorrech, unemployed men overpowered police and locked them up. Reinforcements liberated them.

Thirty persons were taken to hospitals in Treves following a violent battle between Rhineland Separatists and political enemies.

Two persons are reported killed and eleven wounded in a clash between Nationalists and Communists near Leipsic.

BRIGHTON WAR MEMORIAL RID OF GASOLINE TANK INVASION

Opposition of American Legion Post members, church, hospital and neighborhood forces resulted in quick rejection today by the street commissioners of a proposal to install a 2,000-gallon gasoline filling station in Brighton near the $4,000 World War Memorial.

Permit for installation of the station was applied for by Hubert J. Davis of No. 5 Henshaw street, Brighton. The station would have been within twenty-five yards of the memorial.

UNABLE TO TELL FRIEND OR FOE COP IN DARK ALLEY, PRAYS

Supposing you were a policeman. Had a prisoner under arrest in a dark alley and suddenly a man entered with a shotgun, what would you do?

You don't know whether he is friend or foe.

"I prayed," said Patrolman Alex Morrison of the Somerville police. He had collared Benjamin D'Entremont of Washington street, Jamaica Plain, attempting to burglarize a drug store at No. 1393 Broadway, Somerville, he says. He had him in an alley when in walked Peter Mortesen, custodian of the Somerville contagious hospital. Mortesen had a shotgun.

"I didn't know whether he was a cool-headed or friend," said Morrison. "I reached for my gun, the Mortesen struck a match and I recognized him."

D'Entremont was arraigned in Somerville Court charged with attempted burglary. He was held for trial.

At Arrah, in Bengal, a tiger killed 18 persons in a single night.

NANTASKET RAID A ROUT FOR AGENTS

Blame Faulty Search Warrant and the Destroyed Liquor Must Be "Restored"

The first of the Nantasket Beach liquor-raid cases, brought before United States Commissioner Hayes today, resulted in utter rout for the Federal prohibition authorities.

The problem of returning 405 bottles of beer and two quarts of "Johnny Walker," which they haven't got, faces Federal Agents James R. Horgan and John Hall, who made the raids on the Surfside Inn, Marlboro Hotel and Warwick Inn on August 20.

The liquor was destroyed by the agents under instructions of Prohibition Director Lynch.

The beer and whiskey was taken from the premises of the Surfside Inn, represented in Federal Court today by Florence Pfeiffer and Thomas Boyle and their counsel, Timothy Callahan.

ERROR IN WARRANT.

An error in the search warrant resulted in dismissal of the charge. The search warrant, it developed, was dated August 28. In obtaining it, the agents made affidavit they bought liquor at the Inn on August 21. Commissioner Hayes agreed it was an impossible situation. If it was a clerical error, he couldn't help it, he said.

The predicament of Agents Horgan and Hall recalls Commissioner Hayes' remarks on other occasions when confiscated liquor was destroyed, such as:

"Was is this man Lynch anyway, to take on himself to give orders to agents who may be totally irresponsible persons?"

MARLBORO CASE UP.

The Marlboro Hotel and Warwick Inn cases were taken up immediately after the dismissal of the first complaint.

The Surfside search warrant was obtained from Commissioner Gordon of Springfield because an earlier attempt to raid the Nantasket Beach resorts resulted in a "leak" after the warrant was applied for in Boston. That time the innkeepers gave the agents the laugh when they appeared.

2 FINED $50 EACH FOR DRIVING OFF CAR

John Hefter of Brighton avenue, Allston, and John MacDougall of Charlestown were fined $50 each by Judge Connolly in Brighton court today, on a charge of unlawful appropriation of an automobile. The two, police allege, took an automobile belonging to Fred E. Wheeler of Graylock road, Allston, and were arrested after a chase.

critics of some reviewers without a dyspepsia. They are a hard-boiled, tongue-lashing aggregation, oftentime taking their work too seriously, approaching every picture with the firm determination to live up to their title of critics regardless of its entertainment value.

"Little Old New York" opened with unanimous approbation. Marion Davies earned a place in the first line of stars for her work in "When Knighthood Was in Flower." She firmly established herself in "Little Old New York." It is a charming love story of Old New York at the time when Vanderbilt was a ferry operator, when Delmonico first opened his little restaurant, when Washington Irving was a gay young blade, when John Jacob Astor was laying the foundation of the great family fortune, when Robert Fulton invented the first steamboat. As Patricia O'Day, a beautiful colleen who is forced by her father to come to America impersonating her dead brother as heir to an estate, she could not have been supposed by any actress on any screen. She should be decorated by the Irish Free State for distinguished service.

"Medals should also be sent to Sidney Olcott, who directed the picture with a song in his heart, to Luther Reed, who adapted Rida Johnson Young's stage play, to Joseph Urban, who framed it in technical beauty, and every member of the cast should be cited for splendid performances. Harrison Ford plays young Delevan, whom "Pat's" father seeks to deprive of the legacy by masquerading his daughter as his dead son, with rare understanding.

"Even the Authors' League must admit this is art."

The Quest of the Argo

Before myths became history, through the mythology of all nations runs the story of gold. The most widely known legend is of course the story of Jason and his pursuit of the golden fleece.

Jason undertook the quest accompanied by the noblest heroes of Greece. The crew was supposed to number fifty, one man for each oar of the Argo. This vessel was so named for its builder, Argos.

The goddess Athena herself superintended its construction and inserted in its prow a piece of oak from Dedona, which was endowed with the power of speaking and delivering oracles.

The ship sailed from Sicily to the further shore of the Black Sea to secure the golden fleece, guarded there by a dragon in a grove sacred to Mars. After incredible adventures, which have been sung by the poets of many centuries and many countries, Jason secured the fleece and returned home with it in triumph.

The quest for things fashioned of gold continues today; for gold is always beautiful and urges the craftsman to his greatest endeavor in design and finish.

We have many things in gold which make unusual and delightful gifts.

OPEN FIGHT FOR SINGLE FARE TO REVERE

Residents of Revere, Chelsea, Malden, Everett, and other communities served by the Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company will be given an opportunity to air their protests against the payment of double fares to Boston Wednesday morning in room 415, State House, by the Metropolitan Planning Commission.

Notices were sent out by Vice-Chairman A. C. Ratchesky today. They will be asked to tell why they think service can be improved and prices lowered. This is the first meeting of the commission in carrying out the instructions from the last Legislature to "investigate the expediency and feasibility of consolidating under one management the operation of all street railway lines in Boston, Chelsea and Revere, and the ways and means by which such results may be accomplished."

pointed and the mothers will attend the children through the examination.

Every baby will be examined by a psychologist, a child specialist; an eye and ear specialist; a nose and throat specialist; a dentist; and a weighing and measuring group of doctors and nurses. Conducting the examination, which is open to the public, will be sixteen doctors, twenty-three registered nurses, and twelve women assistants.

Because of the large force available for the examination the time required is usually only about 30 minutes for the average child. For the babies who score 95 per cent. or more toward perfection a few minutes more are required in order that a special group of eight medical experts may check up the scoring of the prospective prize winners.

Beauty of face does not enter into the scoring. Some youngster who might get a look-in at the old-fashioned baby show may win the silver cup for his mother in Boston.

HEAVY RESPONSE.

The response which the Boston American mothers are making to the announcement of the unprecedented opportunity of obtaining free a $150 examination is a compliment to their intelligence. A fine lot of babies have been registered.

In Salt Lake City twenty-eight pairs of twins and two sets of triplets entered for the special prizes offered for twins. In Boston only four pairs of twins have been registered. But so sure are the health show authorities that others will enter the contest that they have set aside Friday, October 12, as Twin Day at Mechanics Building.

Despite Loss of Legs Motorcycle Rider Covers 48,000 Miles

Richard B. Coogan, paralyzed motorcycle rider, stopped off in Boston on his way to his home in New York. Coogan, operating a motorcycle despite the loss of the use of both legs, has covered most of the States in the Union and Canada on his coast to coast trip.

He has covered 48,000 miles and operates his machine by a long arm extending from the steering wheel to his seat in a specially made sidecar. Coogan supports himself by selling postcards and has for his motto "Down, but not out."

It Is Easy to Lose an Unsightly Complexion

Use Ordinary Mercolized Wax

Have you ever exclaimed as you beheld your complexion in the mirror—"If I only could tear off this old skin!" And, do you know you can do that very thing? Not to actually remove the entire skin all at once, but to gradually remove the worn, aged and painful, but the thin, sickly cuticle comes off in such tiny particles and so gradually, it doesn't hurt a bit. Little by little the beautiful complexion underneath comes forth. No matter how muddy, rough, blotchy or freckled your complexion you can surely discard it by this simple process. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax, at your druggist's, apply nightly like cold cream, washing it off mornings. The result will be truly marvelous.

Year's Best Selling Novel Reveals Mysterious Return of Youth and Beauty to Old Woman

START THIS BEST-SELLER HERE TODAY

A young and beautiful woman creates a sensation at a first night in New York by rising in her seat at the theatre and coolly surveying the audience through her glasses, after the European fashion. Lee Clavering, a brilliant newspaper writer, is immediately interested, and learns she is the image of a former society belle, Mary Ogden, though much younger than she should be at that time. He makes her acquaintance and finds she is Countess Josef Zattiany. He nearly guesses her secret. He asks her to marry him. He takes her to a gay studio party, after which she invites him home to hear her story of renewed youth. He is stunned by the revelation. Meanwhile, Janet Oglethorpe, flapper daughter of one of Clavering's intimate friends, confesses her love for him. Then Madam Zattiany agrees to marry him and they plan their honeymoon.

READ ON. THE THRILLS COME FAST

THE intense concentration of writing routed his sense of humor, but he had as many droll stories in his repertoire as Todd. His wife, the famous "Alberta Jones," fierce Lucy Stoner, was the editor, at a phenomenal salary, of one of the "Woman's Magazines," and wrote short stories of impeccable style and indifferent content for the Century and Dial.

They were all intimate friends and argued incessantly and amiably. And they were all devoted to Mr. Dinwiddie, whom they addressed as Excellence, without accent.

When Mary and Clavering arrived at the camp in response to the dinner bell, Eva Darling, who wore very pretty lynx silk bloomers under her sport skirt, was turning hand-springs down the living-room. While the rest of the party applauded vociferously, and Mrs. Larsing, who was entering with a boiled chicken, nearly dropped the platter.

"Just in time, Madame Zattiany," cried Miss Minor. "This is the sixth round and she is panting—"

But she interrupted him. "Mary"—from this time one. I insist. You make me feel an outsider. I won't be addressed in that formal manner nor answer to that foreign name again."

"Nancy Mary Mary!" shouted the party with one accord, and Clavering drew a long breath. He had wondered how she would manage to feel Mary Ogden under the constant bombardment of a name that was a title in more ways than one. But he might have trusted her to manage it.

In the afternoon Mrs. Minor suggested having tea in the woods, and they all walked—single file—five hundred yards to drink their tea and eat their cakes (Larsing carrying the paraphernalia in a pine grove at the summit of a hill, and then walked back again, clamoring for supper. Mary had been monopolized by Powers and Burton, personally vouchsafing Clavering a glance. During the evening they were all too pleasantly tired and replete to dance or to play the charades they had planned, but lay about comfortably, listening to a concert of alternate arias and jazz.

Clavering did not have a word alone with Mary. She sat on one of the divans between Gore and Todd, while Scores lay on the floor at her feet, his head on a cushion, one foot waving over a lifted knee. He perfect picture of a contented flapperight. They kept up a continuous murmur, punctuated with gay shrieks of laughter. Clavering had sullenly taken a chair beside Babette Gold, whose metallic humor simultaneously amused him, but she was sound asleep before his eyes.

He took a cigar and went out on the veranda, where he could see Mary through the window and whisper to her as she passed from her easement. It was a scene that if introduced into a modern play would have driven him from the theatre and tipped his pan with vitriol near morning, but it appealed to him somehow, as the perfect picture of a contented flapperight. They kept up a continuous murmur, punctuated with gay shrieks of laughter. Clavering had sullenly taken a chair beside Babette Gold, whose metallic humor simultaneously amused him, but she was sound asleep before his eyes.

His room was downstairs next to Mr. Dinwiddie's, and he made up his mind to let himself out softly at midnight, throw pebbles at her window and whisper to her as she passed from her easement. It was a scene that if introduced into a modern play would have driven him from the theatre and tipped his pan with vitriol near morning, but it appealed to him somehow, as the perfect picture of a contented flapperight. They kept up a continuous murmur, punctuated with gay shrieks of laughter. Clavering had sullenly taken a chair beside Babette Gold, whose metallic humor simultaneously amused him, but she was sound asleep before his eyes.

The door between seven and eight was a fixture one in the upper corridor. There was only one bathroom on the second floor. Scores and Miss Gold took their morning plunge in the lake, but the rest preferred the less drastic shower, and there was a continual darting to and fro of forms clad in bathrobe or kimono, the vanquished peeping through door-cracks waiting for the bathroom door to open—signal for another wild rush down the hall a scuffle at the door, a triumphant slam and bang, and loud vituperations from the defeated. Mary calmly waited until the last, and came down, cool in a white sweater and heavy white tweed skirt, after the others had cleared the generous platter of ham and eggs, and the mountain of corn bread was a hillock of crumbs.

"Oh, Mary!" said Mr. Dinwiddie, reprovingly, "and you so prompt as a rule. To-day—"

"I've no thought of going without my breakfast," said Mary unpenitently. "Ring the bell, Jim."

The men had risen, but Clavering alone had determination in his eye. He pulled out a chair beside his own, and Mary accepted it gracefully, casting a mourning greeting to the others.

"How good of you to keep this chair for me, Mr. Clavering," she murmured. "It is shocking of me to be so lazy."

"I'm sick of this game," growled Clavering. "If you are today—"

"Why, I am sure you are going to take me out on the lake immediately after breakfast."

His amiability was immediately restored, but his gaiety was somewhat forced. "You are making charming fun morning, Mrs. Ogden. I wished last night that there was a gaiter or eyes a bright in the room, that I might correlate benefits your wishes."

And Mary actually blushed. She had slept dreamlessly, and between the night mountain air and her new role, she felt as light-hearted as Eva Darling, who was holding Mr. Dinwiddie's hand openly.

"Oh, Excellence!" cried Mrs. Minor from the other end of the table. "What do you say to having a picnic lunch? Didn't you tell me that you knew of a lovely gorge about six miles from here? Scott Bowden between forest ticks! Penalous coasted in the ashes! Financial! Heavenly!"

"Anything you say," replied Mr. Dinwiddie rather tonelessly. "Want to put it on the vote?"

"Let me answer for the crowd," commanded Todd. "It is my duty when in the woods to eat our meals after as much unnecessary toil and to enjoy as much discomfort as is humanly possible. Otherwise we might as well stay in town. Well hilariously tramp six miles with packs, sit on the damp ground, extract earwigs, eat burnt scrab and half-cooked potatoes, and then tramp back again, our spirits gradually rising at the prospect of a decent meal eaten in comfort—"

"Kill me!" cried Minor. "Don't we come to the woods to tramp? I want to tire twenty pounds this trip, and if you don't you ought to. I vote we make Rolly carry a sack of potatoes."

"It's agreed then?" asked Mr. Dinwiddie, telling his hope that it was not. But the assent was general. They were all as excited over the prospect of a picnic as if they were when children about to enjoy their first charitable outing, and it was settled that they were to start at ten o'clock. Mrs. Minor and Miss Gold went to the kitchen to help Mrs. Larsing make sandwiches and salads, and the others ran down to the lake.

Clavering had left the boat in a tree in a little inlet far down the lake and they were walking through a wood of pine, hemlock and balsam. There was no leafy curtain here, although they could see only glimpses of the silver lake through open vistas between the staid columns of the spruce. A trail was hardly necessary for there was no undergrowth, and although the trees were set close together they were easily circumnavigated.

It was some time since they had spoken. His face was graver than she had noticed it, and she waited for him to break. She almost could feel those unuttered words beating on the silence of the woods. There was nothing else to break that silence but the faint constant murmur of the trees, and, somewhere beyond that leafy curtain, the sudden trilling of a bird. Mary knew the secret of the oppressive of the high isolation from other men. The camp and its gay party might have been an aeon far distant also.

He put his arm around her for a moment.

"I am not going to pretend any further," he said. "It is too big for that. And you have never been anything but Mary Ogden to me, except perhaps on that night I have gratefully dismissed from my mind. I called you Mary Ogden to myself until I learned your new name, and I don't think that name has ever come into my thoughts of you. And although you slipped on another skin with it you were always Mary Ogden to me."

"You needed a new name for your new role, but, like any actress on the stage, it had nothing to do with your indestructible personality. I say this because I want you to understand that although I cannot play up to your little comedy any longer and go through the farce of making you as if you were a girl—I shouldn't like you half so well if you were—I do not think of you or wish you to think of yourself as anything but Mary Ogden."

He paused a moment, and she glanced her arm about him and they walked on through the wood.

"I am not going to consider myself a 'cruel, ruthless' King Cophetua," he said.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

"NO, I can't blame Miss Greg ory," I replied gravely. "After all she has her own life to live. And a State competition means much to her. In a way. I suppose, as this one to me. She's furthering her career. I'm trying to find my brother. There's no danger there, since in all my life thus to bring Neal back. But I can't expect a stranger to drop everything to help me."

"Are you trying to defend her from me?" asked Betty with a note of tender amusement.

"I don't have to, on IT," I murmured.

"She's a genius," Betty said in half to herself. "She has her career. Naturally we couldn't be sure of the success of Jim's play. I'm sorry, Anne, but it must just be put down as one of our heartbreaking disappointments. I'll take it so comfortable. Otherwise it would be uncomfortable for me to feel for Jim. You see that, don't you?"

I couldn't quite fathom Betty's state of mind. There was an opaque stillness about her gaze which made them all seem to be feelings set behind a curtain. But the next morning, when I arrived at the office, I found Betty typing up and down my room in a sort of still fury.

"Anne!" she cried, turning to me, "where are your wits? Are you incapable of thinking of anything in the world but the wedding for Neal? How much are you going to let your novelty out?"

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Nothing—nothing!" she flung out furiously. "I simply don't what to say to you. I see you are trying to a shadow. It's useless coming." I—Oh, Anne, forgive me, but—I you know that Jim was sitting for the young artist who is the central figure of Ruth Gregory's painting for the next State House.

"Of course," I said, thinking over the words determinedly. "And why shouldn't he? Didn't they call him 'Fearless Jim of the Flying Forces?' Who is better equipped than he to sit for such a portrait?"

Betty stood staring at me. I met her gaze without flinching, though I felt as if my heart were sinking through my body like a stone of lead.

"I had to tell you," murmured Betty at last. "I felt you had a right to know. I—I love you, Anne. Possibly I've been neglecting you a little for old friends."

"No," I murmured weakly, wondering what I'd do when Betty left me alone with the knowledge she'd just given me.

"Yes, I have," Betty went on doggedly. "But I won't any more. I just want to tell you that I'm not planning to see much of Ruth, or Jim, or her for after refusing to paint the portrait of Neal I promised you. I shall be at you here for whenever you want, dear. I—I love you."

Then Betty turned and fled. And I turned to face the fact that Jim was posing for Ruth Gregory's "Young Aviator" and that Jim hadn't been the one to tell me.

From that moment when Betty told me that Jim posing for Ruth Gregory's painting, "The Young Aviator," there just was one thing besides finding Neal again that I wanted in all the world. And that was for Jim to tell me about the picture of his own accord—without question from me or hint from Betty.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

WHAT TOXINS REALLY ARE

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.

YOU have heard much about germs causing disease.

It is important for you to remember that germs themselves are not the only direct cause of illness. Thus you may have a germ harbouring for a time about your tonsils, gums or teeth, or tonsils, or in the intestines, and never feel a pain. From some local source, however, and not always that, you may experience no symptoms that you would call real sickness.

Dr. Reed

On the other hand, a rapidly increasing accumulation of germs in these or other localities, so small as to cause no uneasiness, may make you seriously and even fatally ill.

You say that these germs remain in one locality and do not even make it sore, yet they make me sick all over. How can that be? you more or less incredulously inquire.

Here is the explanation:

Germs multiply with great rapidity. In the process of multiplication they manufacture more or less poisonous poisons called toxins. Each species of germ manufactures it own species of toxins. This poison or toxin is absorbed into the blood and forms the condition known as toxemia or poisoning of the blood. Sometimes in rundown conditions of the system the germs themselves do get into the blood, but as a rule it is the poisons or toxins manufactured by the germs and not the germs themselves that do the mischief.

Clogged-Up? Here's Quick Aid

NEVER mind what you are taking now for constipation. For all you know there's a better remedy. The next time you are clogged up try Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. A laxative successfully used for 30 years, the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. Mrs. John A. Goins of Butlerville, Ind., constipated all her life, her stomach injured from years of pill taking, is now functioning daily since taking Syrup Pepsin, and Mr. David O'Connor of Canton, Ohio, suffering steadily for three years, got relief after a few doses. The list of successful users of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is naturally large as over 10 million bottles are sold annually.

Formula on Every Package

Get yourself a bottle at a drug store, the cost being less than a cent a dose. Take a spoonful at bedtime for a few nights and we guarantee that the most chronic constipation will be relieved, or refund your money. A few doses in succession soon train the stomach muscles to act for themselves. Many, however, take it once a week and in that way keep the bowels regularly open. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, unlike harsh physics such as calomel, "candy cathartics," salt waters and powders, is a simple vegetable laxative composed of Egyptian senna and pepsin with tasty aromatics which are entirely harmless.

This Remedy Guaranteed

It has been accurately proven that a constipated person is only 75 per cent efficient. It slows you up, makes you dull and lazy. Take Syrup Pepsin the first day you do not have complete bowel movement. Take it, guaranteed, for constipation, torpid liver, dyspepsia, biliousness, sour stomach, headache, lack of appetite. A spoonful at the first sneeze or sniffle will kill a cold overnight. Break the habit of winter start with constipation followed by a cold.

BOSTON BASEBALL INTEREST LOW

There is very little Boston interest in the World's Series. The fans of this city are disgusted with the "bought and paid for" methods of the Yankees and Giants. Incidentally even New York isn't greatly excited over the coming battles.

MINIATURE DEMPSEY FIRPO BOUT

The Dempsey-Firpo bout will be staged in miniature when Hamboro Kelly and Pat McCarthy clash at the Suffolk A. A.'s show at the Boston Arena on Friday night. The fighter who gets over the first heavy smash is very likely to be the one to leave the ring the victor.

Jack Conway Picks Villa to Win Over Thomas

Jack Conway, who holds the world's record for picking winners, hands out the following dope on tonight's Armory A. A. show.

"Villa and Thomas will turn in a slugging match," says Jack. "I am picking Villa to win, though I figure he won't have things his own way.

"Poncho has been our lad's jinxer. We were the first American miner to recognize his wonderful possibilities and he has come through with a win every time we have picked him to do so.

BOSTON AMERICAN

Largest Evening Circulation in New England—September 24, 1923

Special appropriations in the city of Boston budget for 1922-23 included $750,000 for repairing streets and $250,000 for improving them.

Give Us More Raisins

To the kings of chewing gum and all able manufacturers of food packages:

You admire California and live there, more or less. You know of California's great two hundred thousand ton raisin crop that should be distributed, especially among the CHILDREN of this country. You know that the crop should be multiplied by two.

Those that manufacture chewing gum and similar products could do it. Make a raisin package and sell the raisins compressed in little slabs, as you sell chewing gum, the packages to cost one cent or five cents, as the chewing gum.

You have the machinery, you have the retailing organization, you have the money and the energy.

Somebody will render a great service to agriculture, to the health of children and to grown-ups and make a great deal of money by including among the kinds of food packages, COMPRESSED RAISINS, a "raisin gum" to be chewed and SWALLOWED. Raisins contain iron, of great value to health, they contain 70 per cent. of GRAPE SUGAR, needed by all children.

The problem of the California raisin growers is DISTRIBUTION. You have the distributing power and you could render no greater service to the health of children and of the population generally, than by distributing a hundred or two hundred thousand tons of well prepared raisins every year.

You would know how to make the package, and compress the product—if necessary, using as a "binder" a small percentage of some other wholesome food material.

Such an enterprise, besides rendering a public service, would create another great fortune for you, and what would interest you more, enable you to be among California's greatest benefactors, among the builders of a great State.

Watch the Feeding

"Nourishment" That Kills

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

Whenever newspapers describe for you the illness of a well-known man, watch the doctors and the methods of FEEDING.

Some of our most learned medical gentlemen allow their patients to die by giving them so-called "nourishment." When a man is desperately ill, food is not "nourishment." A BODY DISEASED CANNOT ABSORB NOURISHMENT. Food under such conditions is apt to be a deadly poison.

When a dog is sick it wanders off, hides away. No dog doctor, to oblige an anxious family, forces food down the sick dog's throat, AND SO IT RECOVERS.

A patient with a fever above normal, unless absolutely emaciated, lacking strength and tissue to maintain life, should take water AND NO OTHER "NOURISHMENT" UNTIL NORMAL TEMPERATURE IS RESTORED.

Any man near to normal weight can and should do without any food but water while fighting high temperature. Food interferes with the body's fight against poison.

To the Race Horse Papyrus

Look Out for Our Home Brew

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

It seems that Papyrus, the race horse than won the Derby, drinks beer occasionally. This is a fact, not humor.

Many horses in the United States have been made to go higher in jumping contests by giving them a little whiskey before the jumping. Some do better on beer.

The owner of Papyrus, who has heard something about American prohibition, says he isn't worried, his horse might do without beer and be happy for a while, but he thinks he can get all the beer he needs over here.

It is fair to warn the owner who has insured his horse for $250,000 that if Papyrus drinks American home brew or home distillation it would be well to take out some extra insurance.

A race horse so delicate that the veterinarians order him to bring his own drinking water with him wouldn't stand American home brewing or distilling long. Americans won't stand it long, either. Watch the deaths from kidney trouble increase in the next few years.

Preposterous Yesterday

Cold Fact Today

Copyright, 1923, Star Co.

The Alpine Societies will establish connections between the highest peaks in the Alps and the hotels in the valleys by means of the WIRELESS TELEPHONE. We all accept THAT as a matter of course. A few years ago it would have been called preposterous.

In the course of centuries we shall accept, equally as a matter of course, the establishment of wireless telephoning from one planet to another.

That suggestion seems preposterous now, and you will easily find a dozen "scientists" to prove the impossibility of sending messages through the ether beyond our atmosphere. But they don't KNOW. Nothing that the human brain can sanely IMAGINE is impossible

Who Started It?

Nations Rarely Ask

Just who caused the trouble between Greece and Italy isn't known. Some Italian officials were killed. The Greeks say they THINK that Albanians did it. The Italians say the Greeks did it. And they don't want to hear any ARGUMENT.

The Greeks, anxious to avoid war, have deposited fifty million lire, the amount required by Italy, pending investigation of the case by the League of Nations. Italy declines arbitration, but we must not judge too rapidly.

When the Maine was sunk we BELIEVED the Spaniards did it. But we never proved it, and we went to war on our "belief." Where national "honor" is involved and feeling high, "BELIEF" is good enough "PROOF."

QUAKERS IN LONDON ACTIVE

LONDON, Sept. 24—The old Quaker meeting house at Coolham, Sussex, is being restored by a party of young Quakers who include two London lawyers, a painter, a gardener, two teachers and a schoolboy. One of the party is a baronet.

William Penn, who lived at Warminghurst, six miles away, from 1677 until he emigrated to America, attended this meeting house and preached there. When Penn sailed for America many Coolham Quakers accompanied him, and gradually the meeting house fell into disuse.

Father Deserted

Editor Helping Hand:

I wonder if any of your kind readers have any rompers they would send me for two little boys, brothers, that I am caring for at present. Their father deserted them and their mother a year ago, and I took them in. Now she has left them, and I can't get her to do a thing for them, and they are almost naked. I have seven children of my own, so can't do any more myself. They are four and three years old. If you can find clothes for them, it will be a great blessing.

I wear size 34 or 36 and clothes size 3½ or 4 and clothes size 3½. I am without anything, and will be very thankful for anything, no matter how old, for myself and the boy.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

No Liquor Needed

Editor Boston American:

Very few Americans need stimulants to make them good fellows. Americans are, as a rule, good fellows at heart, but a few whippets up for a few alcoholic glasses they get naturally brutal and forget that the board bill will be due next Saturday night. Bring enough a man's pay for his own wants, but it really does not increase such a good fellowship.

T. D. EVERETT.

Scrapping Our Ships

Editor Boston American:

It doesn't occur to me that the government is doing an unwise thing in scrapping the old battleships. For instance, the highest market price today for scrap steel is from $3 to $10 per ton, but it would cost from $17 to $26 per ton for labor to dismantle these ships. Considering such a saving, it seems a very economical plan to permit our gas-[illegible] from their eyes on [illegible] hulks and let them be mainly to the [illegible] who desire [illegible] Davy's locker.

G. J. FRANKLIN.

Need Clothes Badly

Editor Helping Hand:

My husband has been out of work for three months and we are greatly in need. I have three children. One is a boy six who has just started into school this September, and he has only one little wash suit which I have to keep clean for him. He has no underclothing except one long Summer jersey. The other boy is in the same condition, and I have a baby girl, two, who is in need of clothes, and I also have my sister, who is twelve years old, to care for in addition. I hope and pray [illegible] to answer me, as I don't want to keep my boy out of [illegible]

CONGRESS MAY NOT AGREE WITH THE PRESIDENT

By Herbert Kaufman

IF the railroads don't want to consolidate, President Coolidge is not in favor of compelling them—a White House decision which takes most of the wind out of Interstate Commerce Commission's sails.

Congress, however, is yet to be heard from on the subject—especially the agricultural blocs who behold in the simplification and grouping of systems much lower tariffs for their constituencies and a closer Federal grip on transportation.

Besides freight rates, Pullman charges are ripe for inquiry. Recent dividends and financial statements suggest that the company can well afford to cheapen sleeping car accommodations.

Some day a bold and fearless House or Senate committee will act in the interests of the traveling public and put that roomy corporation on a legislative grill.

Pullman stock wouldn't be selling so high if the concern paid respectable wages to its porters instead of the miserable pittances which force them to rely upon the generosity of already overtaxed patrons.

Another shabby practice is the compulsory purchase of uniforms from designated contractors. The outfit is an economic parasite, anyhow.

Railroads could operate their own wheeled hotels at less than they rent them, as several transcontinental lines have exemplified.

Some Slips of Tongue and Pen

By this time, Professor Irving Fisher should understand how the American people feel about men who wait until after a President's death to assail his sincerity.

Senator Willis, speaking at Marion, rakes the learned doctor fore and aft and asserts that friends of the League of Nations have miscalculated if they expect to bolster their cause by such tactics.

Oscar Underwood changes his mind. Mussolini's successful defiance of Geneva convinces the astute Alabaman that the league is an impotent body. Better late than never.

The destruction of a railroad bridge at Essen and the jailing of a Berlin editor for announcing that Stresemann had decided to abandon passive resistance would indicate that Germany is still determined to withstand occupation. If cables did not report the resumption of work by government postal and telegraph employes.

Something's hatching, but nobody knows what the egg holds.

We Live to Learn

Science makes ground even if world politics struggle in a quagmire. Professor Gustaf Embden, at Frankfort, proclaims that sodium-dihydrogen-phosphate is an antidote for fatigue.

Experiments with troops and subsequently with coal miners, show that the compound is a powerful stimulant.

Dr. Howell of Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene credits the reputed efficacy of Embden's chemical cocktail, but prefers to observe its action upon the intestines before recommending promiscuous adoption.

Like all proposed substitutes for alcohol, this, too, has a string tied to it.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON AN OLD ROMAN CAMP

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

CLOSE by the old chateau of Berluhec, near Quimperle, in the Department Finistere, France, where I am writing this, there is an ancient moss-covered, circular wall of stones about a thousand feet in circumference, roughly but firmly built, and backed and surmounted on the inner side by a much higher earthen embankment, which rises twelve to fifteen feet above the level of the foot of the wall on the outer side.

This embankment is twenty-five feet thick at the base, rounded on the top, and overgrown with trees and shubbery. Most of the trees are towering firs, with a few huge beeches, and many have trunks from eighteen to thirty inches in diameter. That implies a great age, though nothing comparable with what tradition assigns to the wall and embankment, for it is a local belief that this was a Roman fortified camp, dating back perhaps almost to the time of Caesar's conquest of Gaul. The characteristic two opposite gateways still exist.

Why did those Romans come here and build fortifications to enable them to stay? What was Caesar in search of and with what hope did he march his legions to follow him? How did he nerve himself to order and witness the slaughter of the inhabitants of these distant regions, —men, women and children alike slain in cold blood by tens and hundreds of thousands (40,000 at Avarlcum alone—and that after the place was taken)?

One of the most powerful of his inducements was that he wanted money! Rome was venal and he meant to go back and buy it. Caesar's celebrated campaigns in Gaul were great freebooting, piratical raids. Caesar's conquering legions were trained robber bands, practising disciplined murder and pillage under the eye of a master bandit. Rome despised Carthage because the great Phoenician city lived and prospered by commerce and exchange.

THREE-MINUTE TRIPS

TEMPLE FOR SACRED RATS

By Temple Manning

RATS!" In India this isn't a K.O. expletive of disgust or derision. Nor are the animals themselves despised or looked upon as a menace.

On the contrary, they are held in high esteem, and occupy a place of religious respect among the Hindus.

This strange adoration of the creatures we consider repulsive, and know are the most undesirable members of the rodent family, is a result of the worship of a deity whose history dates so far back that no one has been unable to find out just when or why the rat is associated with him.

This god's name is Ganesha. According to Hindu mythology he was lord of the Ganas, who were a group of inferior deities.

It is this god, Ganesha, who is invoked by the pious Hindus at the beginning of a book—in the same manner the ancient Romans professed their writing with invocations to their patron goddess Venus.

It is Ganesha who removes obstacles. He is propitiated at the beginning of any undertaking. He is particularly endowed with wisdom and judgment.

There is a very old and interesting shrine erected to this mythological god at Deshnoke, India.

Here in Deshnoke is the temple where Ganesha is worshipped. Because Ganesha is always pictured riding on a rat or attended by one, the rat receives part of the homage directed to the god.

For this reason many rats live in state in the temple. The traveler is amazed as he sees pilgrims —for many pilgrimages are made to his temple of the rats—prostrate themselves before a group of rats, who have no idea in life beyond that of eating everything available and keeping a safe distance from cats and hawks.

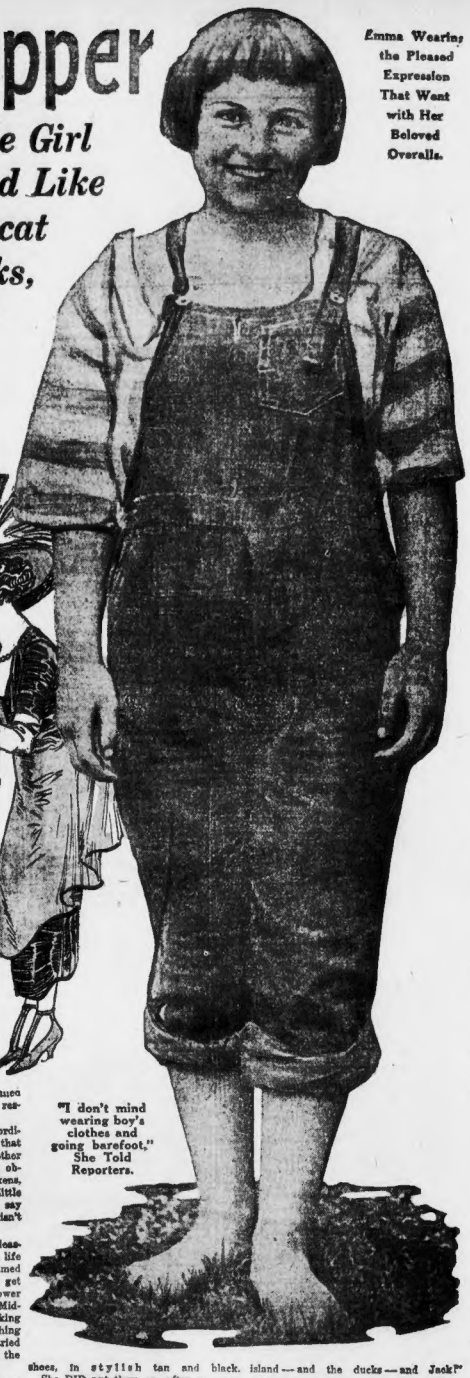
Taming Our Wildest Flapper

How the Pretty Cave Girl "Huck Finn" Battled Like an Angry Bobcat Against Frocks, Lingerie, Silk Stockings and the Many Other "Trimmin's" of Civilized Society

Reproduced from "Everyday Life in the Old Stone Age," by Marjorie and C. H. B. Quennell. G. P. Putnam's Sons.

Mousterian Cave-Dwellers, Living in Much the Same Fashion as Emma Adams When She Was Dragged from Her Desert Island.

Emma Adams Pouting in the Pretty Modern Clothes, Which She Donned Only After a Struggle



Emma Wearing the Pleased Expression That Went with Her Beloved Overalls.

THEY took her to a soda-fountain and let her order a "Strawberry Delight." She pushed it away, half-tasted, and called loudly for clear spring water.

They took her to the movies, where a glossy sheik tamed a stubborn — though beautiful — heroine, and where kings of low comedy wreathed one another with custard pies. She yawned.

They decked her out with a new and nifty hat and dolled her up in a fine and fancy frock. And all the thanks she gave them was, "Oh, what a bore! Take me back to my cave and my ducks and my old, worn, COMFORTABLE overalls!"

Yes, those were the words—and sincere words, too—of Emma Adams, fifteen, whom well-meaning but painfully attentive Kansans have been trying to "civilize." To date, it looks as if their efforts would be futile.

But—you never can tell, particularly when there's a woman, or a girl, concerned. Who knows? In 1928 Emma may blossom forth in sudden sartorial glory; she may turn her back on the cave of her childhood and turn up her nose—rather a cute, boyish one, too—at the overalls for which she now pines.

Just how Emma came to be "discovered," leading the primitive but wholesome life of a modern—and feminine—Huckleberry Finn in a cave on a Kaw River island, is a good story—true, amusing and pathetic. Just why she chose to live that life is scarcely less so.

Her adventures — the innocent ones which all kids turned loose under trees and beside brooks go through—sound a little reminiscent. They have just a tinge of Tom Sawyer and his "best pal and severest critic," the immortal, freckled Huck, of Mark Twain's famous boyhood romance.

The point at which Emma's carefree career split away from Huck's and Tom's was in its duration. They, unlucky youngsters, were able to evade their families' watchful eyes for only a short time. Emma's "vacation" from the routine and dressiness of a town began when she was practically a baby.

Until the Probate Court of Shawnee County, at Topeka, took charge of Emma she had never dreamed of "rolling her own" in imitation of a city flapper; had never longed for a limousine, craved a matinee ticket or hankered after pate de fois gras or some equally indigestible delicacy.

Her father, Andrew Adams, described in dispatches as a "regular cave man" himself, was responsible—in the kindliest way—for Emma's exodus from "tame" life. A wood-chopper and fisherman, he "got back to nature" because of the troubles that beset him in ordinary urban life.

He once had a good job on the Rock Island at Goodland, Kansas, but lost it, and decided to try farming. Then persistent crop failures further discouraged him. Accordingly, he began to hew wood and angle—and the allurement of these twin amusements apparently "got him."

There was also the added barb of a domestic estrangement. Adams and his wife disagreed and they separated, the man taking Emma, then a mere child, and her brother, Jack, now seventeen, with him. While Adams, Emma and Jack migrated to their crude Kaw River paradise, Mrs. Adams got employment on a truck farm near Topeka.

No interference by Mrs. Adams, but pure coincidence, led to the discovery of their wild, woodland life. Certain county officials happened to notice smoke rising from the island's banks while rowing in the Kaw one day. "Where there is smoke there must be fire," they argued, "and the presence of fire suggests people."

So it was not long before Emma and her age, which was within the school attendance limit, were found out, when the county truancy officer, with various welfare workers, piled for the shore on rescue bent.

Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer, in a Cave Near the Scene of This Story.

"Some of the kindest hearts in Topeka bought Emma dainty lingerie, silk stockings and shoes. But she preferred her old garments."

"I don't mind wearing boy's clothes and going barefoot," She Told Reporters.

They were not received any too cordially. Adams objected on the score that once Emma got to Topeka her mother would probably claim her. Emma objected because the ducks and chickens, tamed by her own mottled, muscular little hand, would miss her. Jack didn't say anything, but his lips quivered. It isn't hard to guess why.

The rescuers, however, painted a pleasing and accurate picture of modern life with other human contacts than tamed ducks. They prevailed on Emma to get into the boat, but Emma's will-power proved weaker than her politeness. Midstream, with the mainland already taking shape like a terrifying, clamorous thing bristling with strange people, Emma tried to swim back to father, Jack—and the ducks.

But she reached Topeka at last. There Probate Judge J. D. M. Hamilton decided that a regular education, administered by appointed teachers, was preferable to one picked up by candlelight—through the wavering notes of a kindly but scholastically limited father's voice.

One incident which occurred during the hearing of the case throws a penetrating light on Emma and her dilemma. When they brought her back from the island, her sturdy legs were encased in the beloved, none too fashionable overalls. Her hair was not arranged in precisely a Parisian twist; it was roughly "shingled" a la Kaw River. She was innocent of shoes. No bonnet or bandeau framed her splendid, broad temples.

Some of the kindest hearts in Topeka—feminine hearts—got the idea that Emma might feel out of place in her island outfit, now that she was no longer a girl Huck Finn. Accordingly, they bought her some dainty, fleecy lingerie, some silk stockings, the alluring sheen of which might have touched the fancy of a fastidious "finishing school" miss, and several pairs of admirably fashioned shoes, in stylish tan and black.

She DID put them on, after an argument, but she told her benefactresses quite frankly that she preferred her old garments, even if they were usually associated in Topeka with farmhands.

Only once, say dispatches from the Kansas town, has the cave girl smiled her old, broad-lipped, undiluted smile. That was when, as a special favor, she was permitted to get into her Kaw River raiment. The shock of joy was too much for her and a few tears came suddenly to her bright eyes.

"I don't mind wearing boy's clothes and going barefoot," she told reporters. "I was able to help daddy, too, in keeping house. Maybe if I lived in the city long enough I'd like it—but I wish you'd let me go back!

"I've gone to school, you know," she continued, "even as far as the fourth grade. But most of the time since then I've lived in caves and tents. Daddy would catch fish and sell them. The people around Willard, Kansas, knew him well. They say daddy suggested that I go to his sister, who teaches school in that town. But I'd rather go back to the island — and the ducks — and Jack!"

Psychologists are displaying the keenest interest in Emma Adams' "case." They are curious to find out whether she is a real "throwback" to primitive life and customs; whether her love of a rough, hardy existence, with none of the delicacies and luxuries of modern civilization, is an inherited trait or simply the result of environment.

It is probably the latter, most of them agree; but, then again, it may be that Emma is an atavistic reminder of the cave-dwelling age, when the Mousterians occupied cliffs and caverns, largely to find shelter from the cold.

At the end of the Fourth Glacial Period these peculiar and fascinating people became extinct. And, you may say, it is a far cry from the cave of Le Moustier in the valley of the Vezere, Dordogne, France, to the Adams' primitive shelter on the Kaw River island.

But the fact remains that the Emma Adams of 1928 and all the vanished little Mousterian Emma Adamses similarly enjoyed life in the open—unhampered, schoolless, gloriously free—with the same radiant, sunburned rapture.

Medbury Says—

By John P. Medbury

WE used to be able to drive thirty or forty miles on a Sunday afternoon in a couple of hours, but now the same trip takes us two days in order to read all the billboard advertisements along the road.

YOU go out in the country to enjoy the hillsides and babbling brooks, but the only things you can see are baking powder ads and garage signs.

ONE billboard tells you to watch out for their next advertisement which is three hundred feet ahead.

THEN when you get to that one, it tells you where to find the next.

THIS may be beautiful scenery, but only to the guys who are collecting the rent on them.

SOME of the most interesting signs are put right at railroad crossings and you have to stop your car on the tracks in order to read them.

SOME of the highways are so crowded on both sides that a lot of firms are painting their advertisements on the concrete in the middle of the road. One guy was so near-sighted he had to get out on his hands and knees in order to read them all.

HE had his face right to the pavement and a big touring car came along and ran over his nose.

IT was a good thing he wasn't wearing glasses or he would have punctured their tires.

PRETTY soon so many guys will be crawling along the highway on their hands and knees that they'll have to have a license plate pinned to their coat tail.

DON'T BOLT YOUR FOOD IN YOUR LUNCH-TIME HASTE.

If you were accused of playing "stoker" at a lunch counter you would recent it.

However, look at the dozens of men leaning over their food and fairly shoveling it off their dishes into their mouths at the average lunch counter. You will be one of the lot.

At your own home or at the home of a friend — at business men's luncheons—or at social functions, you are careful about your table manners, are you not?

But when you sit up to a counter to eat with other fellows, you are just one of the bunch.

You chew your food just enough to swallow it, that is all.

You do not get any pleasure out of your food because you bolt it.

You are intent upon getting it into your stomach, so as to satisfy your hunger and let you get out at the earliest possible moment.

Then you are doubtless grouchy and irritablet nte the bargain and so you are harboring hindrances to digestion meanwhile.

Would it not be possible for you to be a little less piglike?

One day a friend asked me to make some fudge at her house. When I left I did not put the things away, as I did not know from where I took the articles. A Castoria bottle resembles a vanilla bottle in appearance. The girl was having a party, and they had the fudge then, when suddenly one of the girls present said: "My, what queer tasting fudge!" Imagine my embarrassment when I realized that I had put the Castoria into the fudge instead of the vanilla.
